MACDONOUGH

The Macdonough Theatre, remodeled and redecorated, will open Sunday afternoon with Evelyn Nesbit Thaw as the attraction. The entire interior has been changed, not only in decoration but in appearance. The draperies and carpets have been renewed, and the artist, Hans Lechner of Holland, has selected colors to harmonize with the woodwork and the walls, which are in old ivory and brown.

The entrance has been transformed and is now the handsomest of any building in Oakland. It is finished in Italian marble and the decorations are in that period, with handpainted mural scenes painted in the center of the famous Watteau decorations in France. The ladies' retiring room has been treated in a panel effect paintings in Watteau.

The chairs have been changed from green plush to ones upholstered in brown leather. Not only has this change been made in the orchestra, but in the balcony and gallery. The entire house has been carpeted in golden brown and cream carpet.

The pit in which the musicians play has been done in old ivory. The entire theater is new except the walls, the name and the management.

It was Manager Giesea of the Macdonough who planned the changes, and they have been excellently carried out by Hans Lechner. The well-known mural artist of Holland, who came to California to superintend the decorations for the Holland Building for the 1915 fair.

MRS THAW ATTRACTION.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, in the latest French musical pantomime entertainment, "Marlette," will be the attraction at the Macdonough Theatre when it reopens today, matinee and night. Mrs. Thaw comes direct from her most successful engagement at the London Hippodrome and Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre in this Alhambra Theatre, London, sensation.

The most talked of woman in the world has scored a tremendous success by her artistic efforts. When she appeared at the Hippodrome in London under an assumed name she was greeted with instantaneous success.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT.

That favorite musical actress, Margaret Illington, in "Within the Law," the reigning dramatic sensation of the year in both New York and London, will be seen here on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in a return engagement with her excellent company.

"Within the Law" tells in a simple, sincere fashion a wonderfully realistic story of a good girl's struggle in the underworld that moves the least impressionable in spite of themselves.

FAMED ENGLISH PLAYERS.

Unusual interest attaches to the announcement that the Stratford-on-Avon players from England's famous Shakespeare Memorial Theater will appear at the Macdonough Theatre April 18-19-20 in "The Merry Wives of Windsor." As "The Merry Wives of Windsor" is a complete new scenic equipment is brought for their repertoire of 14 Shakespeare's plays.

MRS CRANE IS FEATURE.

Mrs. Douglas Crane, as Ivy Paine, was the dancing sensation of Australia a few years ago. She came to this country, and after dancing in the leading cafes in New York, she was engaged by Otis Skinner for the original production of "Kismet." While playing in the latter in Chicago she met and married Douglas Crane, the well-known portrait painter. Together they evolved a series of modern ballroom dances, including the famous Crane Tango, the Hesitation Waltz and the One Step.

OAKLAND BOYS' SUCCESS.

The story of the career of Al Johnson, an Oakland boy, the star of "The Honey-Moon Express," the big New York Winter Garden production now touring this part of the country, reads like a dime novel romance. He ran away from home at an early age to go on the stage, and would have succeeded but for the efforts of his family, who took him captive and brought him back home. Later he returned. Johnson follows Mrs. Crane at the Macdonough.

ORPHEUM

The great emotional actress, Olga Nethersole, comes to the Orpheum this week, presenting the third act of the play that made her name synonymous with those of the greatest players of French drama—"Sapho." The role she created in this play has been the cause of much discussion, and put her name in the mouth of every theater-goer, both in England and on this side. Her advent in vaudeville reserves to be ranked with that of Bernhardt and the other notables from the various artistic walks of life. Herman Timberg, the youthful comedian, brings a brand new lot of songs and dances with him this week. He will be remembered as a member of Gus Edwards' aggregation of girls and boys that toured the circuit last year and that was in this company he scored great success. Besides possessing a broad comedy vein, he dance and sings admirably and is an excellent pantomimist.

Henry Catalano and Jack Denny, good, crisp entertainers, Mr. Denny presiding at the piano. They offer a ragtime acrobatic work for the week in the hands of Keno, Walsh and Melrose, a trio hard to beat in acrobatic feats. The act is full of difficult and trick stunts, the three men appearing in an eccentric make-up.

The athletic act performed by Rice and Morgan is out of the ordinary, replete with stunts, chatter and fun. They are billed under the caption of "Fun in the Ring" and live up to their name.

YE LIBERTY.

Easter week will be observed at Liberty theater with a production of Henry Miller's "Play of Joyfulness." "The Rainbow," one of the dramatic gems of recent years and a play that the Bishop Players will have the distinction of being the first to produce anywhere at popular prices.

When Henry Miller presented this delightful little play here last fall, he took both the play-goers and the dramatic critics of both sides of the bay by storm. All agreed that nothing sweeter, more wholesome or more genuinely pleasing had been seen in years, and the result was that the theaters were not large enough to take care of all those who wanted to see it. And now our own stock company, less than six months later, is offering this identical play at less than one-third of the admission prices charged to see it before. It sure the year.

Albert Morrison will have Henry Miller's role of Neil Sumner, and Miss Isabelle Fletcher that of his wife, while Jane Urban will be "the rainbow," the role in which Ruth Chatterton was so delightful with Henry Miller. Charles Ayres, Henry Shuman, J. Anthony Smythe, Frank Darlen, Mrs. Gleason, Miss Marek, Miss Warfield, Miss Porter and all the other Liberty favorites will have congenial roles as well, and the scenic surroundings will be unusually attractive.

Additional attractiveness will be lent to the presentation of "The Rainbow" next week by the appearance between acts of Thomas Allen Hector, renowned exponent of modern ball-room dancing, who will illustrate a number of the latest and most fascinating dances.

COLUMBIA

Mike and Ike, those travelers in many lands, will accompany his Satanic Master, Mephisto, this week on a brief tour of Hades, when the popular laugh-makers present their original and unique musical entertainment entitled "Oh, You Devil" at the Columbia Theatre, commencing with the matinee today.

DISFIGURED, SHE TELLS OF TRAGEDY OF LIFE

CHICAGO, April 11.—Mrs. Mary Karant will be disfigured for life and lose the sight of one eye. Her husband, from whom she has been estranged, threw acid in her face late Friday night when she refused to be reconciled to him. Karant then swallowed what little of the acid was left and was found dead on a street car.

At the American hospital Mrs. Karant, ignorant of the death of her husband, told about her love affair which began ten years ago in Klett, Russia, when she was a student in the fourth grade.

to be one of the most pretentious offerings ever attempted at the cozy Theatre playhouse. The author has surrounded a clever plot with amusing situations, novel effects and many entertaining features. The comedy calls for two scenes, which offer exceptional opportunities for brilliant stage settings. The first scene represents an artist's studio in Paris, where a brilliant young sculptor, searching for his affinity is introduced quite unwillingly to Miss, a monarch of the lower regions, who makes the acquaintance of Mike and Ike, two escaped convicts, and extends them an invitation along with the others to visit the Devil's Grotto. The action is transferred at this point to Ephraim's domain, where the Irishman and his Hebrew partner have a devil of a time.

Dillon and King will be seen in the leading comedy roles of Mike and Ike, while Miss Miller will enact the role of the young artist, Vilma Stech, Horra Hamilton, Ernest Van Pelt Jack Wise, Vera Vaughn and Clarence Warding complete the cast.

Particular attention has been paid to the musical end of the forthcoming production.

Me Tonight!" to be sung by the quartet and chorus. "Everyday Snap Your Fingers With Me," to be sung by Horra Hamilton, promises to be an exceedingly popular number with the boys of the town.

"I Love the Ladies," to be sung by Jack Wise; "Here Comes My Daddy Now," introduced by Vilma Stech, and several selections by the Columbia Quartet complete the program. The vivacious Ginger Givie under the leadership of Madeline Costume numbers. "The Prize Country Store" will be the popular feature next Monday evening.

Gunboat Smith, America's foremost white boy, tops the new bill of vaudeville at the Oakland Pantages for the week ending this Sunday matinee.

For his vaudeville debut he has arranged a refined exhibition of the many art of self defense and also of the development of the human form. The engagement offers the ladies an opportunity of witnessing a champion in action and introduces them to the mysteries of shadow boxing, rope skipping, boxing, tugging the medicine ball and the other adjuncts of the training camp.

Illustrious marks the progress of the special added attraction which will be presented by Walker's Happy Girls, featuring the comedians Reed and Marshall. This is a large aggregation of colored vocalists dancers and instrumentalists, from various southern states, who are giving a most interesting and original performance.

Impersonators of Italian character, are genuine "Wau" comedians. They wheel on the popular hand organ and provide mirth that is infectious. A surprise novelty is promised in Guy Morston's vaudeville play "The Story of the Spies." The Sisters Rio, charming vocalists, and two reels of comedy motion pictures complete a promising program of Pantages vaudeville.

BROADWAY

Five big feature vaudeville acts, with fourteen people presenting the latest novelties of the variety world will open at the Broadway theater this afternoon.

Rapid-fire comedy, novel and beautiful melodies, graceful dances and rapturous latest offerings will be found in the bill.

Heading this galaxy of acts will be Barry, Wilbert and Barry, novelty comedians and barrel jumpers, featuring a variety of novel and beautiful melodies, graceful dances and rapturous latest offerings will be found in the bill.

Comedy and melody blended in their regular routine will be presented by the Village Four, a comedy "trio" quartet. The four possess excellent voices, well adapted to quartet work, and pass an irresistibly funny brand of patter.

The "fashion plate comedy trio," Vann, Hoffman and Vann, will be seen in a delightful, merry bit of catchy songs, sparkling and graceful dances, and a variety of novel and beautiful melodies, graceful dances and rapturous latest offerings will be found in the bill.

An act which has created a furore in other cities is that of the Howard Brothers, novelty musicians, who will play popular and classical selections on a specially constructed instrument.

Two stage acts in a picture-in-picture manner.

The very latest in vaudeville will be offered by Thomas and Ward, two negro entertainers. The girl is a lively southerner, with a good voice, and is said to get the songs across nicely. Then there will be three reels of first run motion pictures.

The Imperial Pekingese Troupe, the most stupendous act in vaudeville, will be seen at the Broadway Wednesday. On the Sunday following, another big sensation, the King of the Everglades and his Ten Trained Alligators, will head the bill.

OAKLAND PHOTO

Continuing its policy of "Famous Stars in Famous Plays," the Oakland Photo Theater offers for its today, to Wednesday feature, another exceptionally strong play, featuring a famous legitimate star, William Farnum, supported by an all-star cast of exceptional actors. The story of "David Corson" is in itself wonderfully dramatic, with a plot that is as gripping as the most sensational of the stage.

With William Farnum, the distinguished American actor and popular stage star in the title role, the success of the photo play is fully assured.

Farnum's acting in "David Corson" comes as an agreeable treat, and is well up to the standard of the Oakland Photo Theater, which has set for itself with such photo dramas as "The Sea Wolf," "Cyril Scott in 'The Sea Wolf,'" "The Three Musketeers," "The Day of Days," "John Barleycorn," "Evangeline," Farnum's "Soldiers of Fortune," Mary Pickford's "Hearts Afire," Tully Marshall's "Faded Love," and the most recent, "The Redemption of David Corson."

enter lanes and hedge-lined streets that row on the green, back from the fields beyond the village confines come Middle Age and Care that have been out since dawn.

The pictures of these many villages are wonderfully colorful, and the descriptions are full of poetry. One comes to have a genuine admiration for the Englishman's love of outdoors, and his intense appreciation of the calm, sweet beauties of a rural landscape.

These English people are eternally in the open; a walk of ten miles is no task to either men or women; to tramp briskly that far for four o'clock tea and back again for dinner is so common a thing that it is not even mentioned, but is everywhere accepted as the usual and the ordinary. The notion of the Thames is most interesting.

SOCIETY

An encouraging sign of the times lies in the changing measurements of what is known everywhere as "the smart set." There was a time when it had one determining factor, especially in America, and that was "money." In the old world there were the families of the aristocracy, poor though they might be, which had for years represented "family" and a certain culture which the position demanded. America, in its newness, had none of that, and as money bought leisure, and many other things as well, it was a determining factor in social prominence. But America is not as young as it used to be, and standards are changing. It was a good student of modern American conditions who wrote the

"In American society there are many families of extremely modest income whose various members receive more invitations than they can accept. They go everywhere that their wealthy friends go, and frequently in the equipages of those friends. Yet they are not regarded as snobs, but as the 'smart set'." To utter a sneer against them would be doubly unjust. Although unable to return courtesies in kind, they make themselves helpful in an emergency without being servile, and on them is always set the seal of approval.

"The sons of this class are never among the downtown idlers, and the daughters are not found among a faster set."

And here is another optimistic paragraph:

"It is a mistake to imagine that in American society wealth mates only with wealth. If a well-connected girl without a penny of fortune is sufficiently attractive and possessed of that indefinable quality called 'charm,' she is quite as likely to marry as well as any one of her millionaire heiress friends."

"And if a girl of this sort marries a man who afterwards loses his money, she will bravely stand up to the situation, talk optimistically of the future, and inspire her husband with the same courage."

After all, well-bred people quite naturally become friends. One loves to meet the people who are bright and bring with a fine quality of life, and an optimism that reaches far. And amusing people are really most often worth while.

One must endure stupid people, of course, but that does not mean that they often cross the border lines into really intimate friendships.

Not long ago at a luncheon a certain rich young matron said that many people had not taken the trouble to return her invitations to luncheons, teas and dinners.

A quick-witted woman who was evidently in the category, answered:

"Perhaps they think you already repaid when they accepted your invitation." And the silence that thereupon ensued could be heard even off.

Of course there must inevitably be the formal entertainments, full of dignity, which social life considers necessary. There are the important weddings, and the coming-out parties of young girls, and occasionally large receptions to distinguished strangers within our gates. But a great deal of the social entertainment of today goes on in quite an informal fashion. The mother of a household who has established the custom of afternoon tea makes it very informal. She pours the tea and the daughters of the household serve the guests, or the guests serve each other, so that the spirit of home adds to the enjoyment of the hour.

In the heart of the American smart set of today is the woman who knows—the woman who is sure of her social position—the woman who looks her world squarely in the face—and is unafraid.

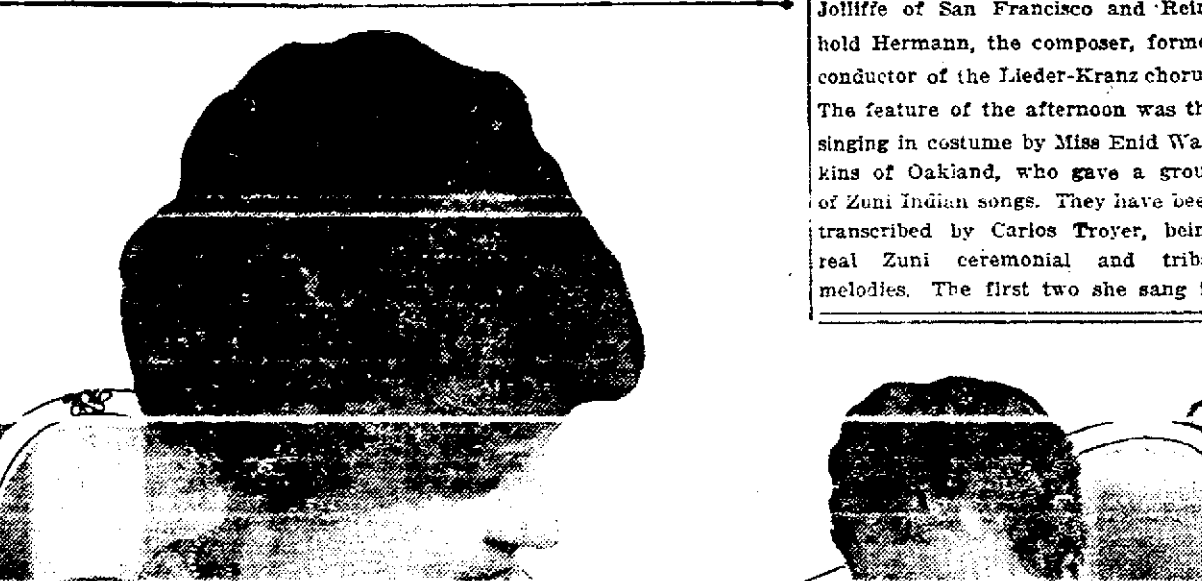

INFORMALITY TO MARK SOCIETY'S DANCES.

Just because of the informality that has gradually become a part of social entertainment, the smart set was ready for the new dances that swept away all opposition. The initial dances were not pretty to gaze upon, but they were informal and were danced against a background of unconventionality. And now society knows that when the hesitation waltz, the tango and the maxixe are correctly danced, they are charming.

And so the informal dansant is here in all its glory. The hours are from 5 to 7; the invitations are sent out over the telephone or on tidbitting cards; the refreshments are very simple, and for music there is just the piano—and always the drum. For the tango is danced without the drum. No one talks of a ball now, for there are never any dance problems. Everybody dances; there are no "ball flowers," and there is no question of a partner for the hostess who has the dance in the afternoon.

There have a dinner dance or a "dinner," which means an informal dance. For the dinner dance the menu is now simple, and dinner is served on little tables, which are afterwards removed for the dancing. The soiree dansant answers a long-felt want. The hostess may entertain a great many people with very little trouble to herself. The rugs come up from the polished floors, the piano and drum send out the weird, haunting music which has come to us from Brazil or the Argentine; a buffet supper is spread in the dining-room, and the guests do the rest—the "rest" being just to enjoy themselves—to have a good time. And the "evening dance" appeals to men, who in the old days could not have been dragged to a more dignified function.

This has eliminated all costly favors, the expense is not too great, and people are better friends because of the informal good times enjoyed in each other's homes.

There is to be dancing enough for everybody—with five tea dances across the bay and with two at our own Hotel Oakland.

In Paris the second opera ball was given last week and the success that used to formerly attend that important function was repeated.

AMERICAN DANCES LEAD THE WORLD.

Apropos of dancing, if Americans keep on they will surely lead the world in that line. And, besides, Americans lead the way in the matter of organization. An Anglo-American dancing club has been organized which will hold three dances weekly at the Savoy in London. Elissa Foster, a well-known New Yorker, now in London, has the matter in hand. He says that he proposes to organize clubs in London and Paris chiefly for Americans, "but owing to the fact that Americans are the best dancers in the world it is not surprising that the English and the French are already anxious to join in."

MISS GERTRUDE ADAMS TO WED HENRY E. JACKSON.

Among the interesting announcements of the week was that of the engagement of Miss Gertrude Adams and Mr. Henry Eugene Jackson, the news being told at a luncheon given by Miss Helen Coogan on Thursday. The Coogan and Adams families have been neighbors at Linda Vista for some years and the young people of the families are fast friends. The news is not a surprise to those who knew the young people for Miss Jackson's devotion to Miss Adams has been apparent for some months. The bride-elect is a most attractive girl of the brunette type. She is a graduate of Mills College and she is now a sophomore in the University of California.

Her friends include a delightful coterie of young girls, among whom are Miss Dorothy Capwell, Miss Phyllis Capwell, Miss Helen Coogan, Miss Lella Ewing, Miss Grace Ewing, Miss Dorothy Taylor and Miss Allene Edoff. Miss Adams is the eldest daughter of Mrs. A. L. Adams and the late Arthur Adams, who was one of the finest consulting engineers in California.

The Jacksons are among the most prominent families on our side of the bay. They represent large and very successful business interests, and they have a very beautiful home at Piedmont, which is the center of hospitality in its most attractive form.

This adds one more to the list of notable spring engagements, for among the very pretty brides-elect of the season are Miss Lulette Mauvais, Miss Mildred Boyne, Miss Grace Ewing, Miss Mildred Wells, Miss Phyllis Capwell, Miss Helen Dabney and Miss Lurline Matson.

MISS ENID WATKINS WINS FAME IN EAST.

California girls have a way of winning out when they try for either literary or musical honors in the East or in Europe. Among the Oakland girls from whom good news is coming from New York is Miss Enid Watkins, who is in the big Eastern city studying for an operatic career. Miss Watkins comes of a family which for years has been well known in Oakland. Many of them are musical, and in this way Miss Watkins has had unusual advantages. She is a very charming girl, just the one to make a striking success in grand opera, and she has a wonderful voice, of which grand things are predicted by leading New York critics.

Miss Emma Thursby, who spent the greater part of last year on this coast and part of the time with Mrs. Frank Havens, is again in her home in New York, which is, as usual, a center around which many important people gather. For Emma Thursby knows nearly all the distinguished singers of the world. She recently gave a leaving Oakland the Schillings have been the guests of Elbert Hubbard, the well-known writer, at his home in Aurora, New York. While there they have had an opportunity of observing the Roycroft movement, which, a few years ago, attracted the attention of the entire country.

The Templeton Crocker have changed their plans for the summer. They originally intended to spend the summer months at "Uplands," their country place at Burlingame, but they have decided to spend the coming season in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gailois (Eliza McMullin) are due to arrive in New York early next week. They are coming directly to California, and they will establish their home for the summer in the Pacific when an attractive cottage has been furnished for them.

They recently gave an elaborate luncheon in Rome in honor of ex-Mayor Ernesto Nathan before his departure for San Francisco to make arrangements for the construction of the Italian pavilion, which should be one of the sights of the big fair on account of its artistic value and exhibits. The designer of the building is Signor Marcello Piacentini, who has accomplished several important works, especially in the international exhibition of 1911.

At this luncheon Mr. Page met several prominent personages interested in the celebration at San Francisco, including the new Italian ambassador at Washington, Count Macchi di Cellere.

Mrs. Robert Hays Smith (Sue Nicoll), whose costumes are always strikingly colorful, will bring back many new gowns from Paris this season.

Meantime many of our well-known women of the smart set are wearing lovely gowns this season. Prominent among them is Mrs. Victor Metcalf, who is one of the most delightful and one of the most charming matrons on this side of the bay. Mrs. Metcalf is wearing a spring gown which is a combination of blue and green, in fine color tones, the costume completed with a French hat in black, with one of the upstanding frills so fashionable on the hats of this season.

Among the lovely gowns that one sees at the Oakland or at the matinees are those worn by:

Miss Ethel Moore, Miss Annie Brown, Mrs. Cora Jones, Miss Matilda Brown, Mrs. W. G. Henshaw, Miss Ernestine McNear, Miss Lulette Mauvais, Miss Cleo Posey, Miss Dorothy Capwell, Miss Dorothy Taylor, Mrs. John J. Donovan, Miss Elsie Everset, Mrs. Leon Boqueraz, Mrs. Isaac Requa, Mrs. Wickham Havens, Mrs. Wallace Alexander, Mrs. Alexander Marx, Mrs. George Hammer, Mrs. Dudley Kinsell, Mrs. Herbert Brown, Miss Esther Sharon, Mrs. Willard Williamson, Mrs. Edward Brayton, Mrs. George McNear, Mrs. Daniel Easterbrook, Mrs. Ben Woolner, Mrs. P. E. Bowles, Mrs. James K. Moffitt, Mrs. Joseph Chanslor, Mrs. Wigginton Creed, Mrs. George Gross, Mrs. J. Leran Pease, Mrs. Charles D. Bates, Mrs. Thomas Crellin.

AFTER-LENTEN DAYS TO KEEP SOCIETY BUSY.

The after-Lenten days give promise of much more than the ordinary degree of gaiety, for many things are scheduled for the months of April, May, and even of June.

Tomorrow there will be one of the largest receptions of the year, with the hostesses, Miss Dunham, Mrs. Langdon and Mrs. Bliss, who used to be known as the "Dunham girls." The old families remember many similar reception in the Dunham home on Alice street. There used to be given there in the attic dramatic entertainments, for Miss Mary Dunham had a great deal of dramatic talent.

Ruth Dunham married into the army, and her husband, Lieutenant Langdon, has had the usual fortune of army men. She has traveled far, and has set up her home in many places. Miss Florence Dunham, who later married Duane Bliss, spent many years in Europe, and Miss Mary Dunham makes her permanent home in Los Gatos.

HERE'S A BIT ABOUT FASHIONABLE PARISIENNE.

A clever Californian writing from Paris sends to her friends some bright suggestions of the clothes now worn by the fashionable Parisienne. Among other things she writes:

"It is the silhouette that concerns the French woman. We Americans think too much of details; we consider each part of the costume separately. The Parisienne thinks of the 'tout ensemble,' of what she calls the 'silhouette.' And here is the way she looks:

"She wears a coat very much shorter in front than it is in the back, and all the skirts have in front what we would call in America 'a hike up'—the upward tilt or slope. This is imperative. And the fashionable little Frenchwoman wears a small black hat, no matter in what straw. It is true you may see hats with all sorts of gay trimming in Paris, but it is not the Frenchwoman who sets the fashion. They wear an entirely black hat, and it means much elegance and distinction, that by comparison other hats look garish and cheap. And all the hats are small—that goes without saying.

Right Way to Sit

(Copyright: 1914: By Lillian Russell.)

THERE is a right and a wrong road to beauty, grace, and health. Which road are you on? If you have not learned to stand correctly, to sit correctly, to walk correctly, to maintain correct posture when you are climbing and descending stairs, or to balance yourself correctly when you stoop to pick up things from the floor or do any other bending, you are on the wrong road to beauty, grace, and health.

Study the illustrations herewith. If you find that you are not maintaining correct postures on all the occasions referred to in the illustrations, set about to work the remedy before it is too late.

First, let us take the standing position. Do you stand with your head bent forward, your chest sunken, your back rounded so that the shoulder blades hang outward, your abdomen protuberant, and your entire weight upon one leg? To continue standing in this way is to do yourself a great wrong. You not only interfere with your freedom in breathing but suffer the consequent ills of undeveloped lungs and chest. Habitually standing upon one leg—generally the right one—leads to a tilting of the pelvis to one side, with a consequent spinal curvature and lowering of one shoulder.

To stand correctly place your heels nearly together, with the toes pointed slightly outward. Hold your legs rigid, your trunk and head erect, and your shoulders somewhat back so as to allow for a free expansion of the chest. Let your arms hang easily at your sides. If your standing position has to be maintained for any great length of time one foot should be placed slightly in advance of the other, the weight being borne upon the straight leg and the active supporting foot, the other being relatively passive. Change to the other foot so that the two extremities may be brought alternately into play and in equal proportion. The most common defect in standing is making the same leg always bear the weight of the body when standing.

How do you sit?

Do you throw yourself into a chair with your head drooping forward and your shoulders rounded, your chest flat, and legs crossed? Besides being a most unlovely attitude, attending this posture are a dozen ills, chief of which are spinal curvature, a hollow chest, and the collapsing of the body forward with a crense at the waist, which interferes with the work of heart, lungs, and digestive organs. In fact, such a sitting posture as that illustrated here affects almost every part of the anatomy in a more or less harmful way. It is anything but a restful position.

The most important thing for you to remember is that a correct sitting posture demands that you push back in your chair as far as possible before leaning forward. Then draw crown of head forward and back. Sliding downward and forward in the seat tilts the pelvis into its most harmful position, and must never be allowed. Of course, the height and shape of chairs have much to do with sitting positions. It is impossible in many to assume a good posture. But do not allow yourself to lounge in a chair. If you are too fatigued to sit straight, lie down until you are rested, but never allow yourself to flop, and, above all, never sit on one foot—a habit quite common among girls.

All leaning forward in a sitting position, as in formal conversation or at the dining table, should be from the hips, not from the waist.

Walking: How do you perform this most natural and by far the best form of exercise? Do you "toe in" or "toe out"? Are you a foolish victim of the "grotesque walk" craze? Do you slink slouch, which, translated, means, do you throw your whole body out of position, letting your chest flatten and your abdomen lead in your walk?

To walk correctly your toes should point directly forward in the "straight foot" position. "Toeing out" is just as incorrect as "toeing in." A perfectly erect carriage of the trunk of the body is essential to graceful and healthful walking. Carry your chest high and let your legs move freely from the hips in a long, swinging step. The arms should hang easily, moving slightly, but not swinging. If the movement of the arms be restrained, the reaction will show in some twist of shoulders or hips. It is correct for the heel to touch the ground first, but if the weight be poised well forward it will be transferred quickly to the ball of the foot. The idea that in walking the toes should touch the ground first is one of the fallacies that has "grown from the wearing of high heeled shoes. For the sake of daintiness and elegance, however, you must avoid thrusting your toes noticeably upward when the foot is extended for a step in walking. But they should not touch the ground first.

Remember that walking is a heart, chest, and lung exercise, therefore one that means prolongation of life. It is difficult for microbes to find a lodging place in those who know how to walk correctly and who practice walking and deep breathing religiously. And with the right walking posture inhaling long, deep breaths is an easy matter.

Don't bend your knees when you stoop to pick anything off the floor. Bend from your hips. To maintain balance, always lead with left leg.

That bugbear with so many women—going up and down stairs—when done correctly is a healthful exercise. It is stimulating to good circulation and deep breathing when not carried to excess. None, not even the young, should run upstairs. It throws too much work upon the heart.

The essential point in stair climbing is maintaining an erect posture. The lifting of the whole weight of the body by the large muscles of the legs and thighs will stimulate heart and lung action quickly. This is the effect that makes stair climbing a good exercise. If you bend forward at the waist the action of heart and lungs is quickly interfered with and undue fatigue and distress result. The way in which the foot is placed upon the stairs in climbing is a matter that usually takes care of itself instinctively when the body is held erect. In descending stairs, however, the toe should touch first so as to lessen the work of the "hold back" muscles and save jar to the body.

Remember: Correct pose will become second nature, to you as soon as you bring your will power to bear upon it.

LILLIAN RUSSELL'S ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES BY BEAUTY SEEKERS.

B. E.: The red veins which come on the sides of the nose and the cheeks are a peculiarity of the individual. The walls of the capillaries are thin and give way. You should go to a skin specialist and have him treat them, for no mild applications will avail. I shall be happy to send you my astringent lotion.

A. R. D.: I would advise you to consult an oculist. It may be that your trouble is coming back again. Wash your eyes with a good eye wash each morning and at night rub a bit of vaseline into the lashes. Be careful you do not get any of it into the eyes. I shall send you the formula for eye wash if you will send me a stamped addressed envelope.

ANNA: Don't have any of your teeth pulled just to straighten the front teeth. Go to a good dentist. He will straighten your teeth for you without pulling them. When the skin peels from the face it is dry and needs a good nourishing cream to supply the oil that is lacking in the skin. I shall send you the formula for the skin food, also instructions for removing blackheads and pimples. If you will send me a stamped addressed envelope.

JANE: The forehead expresses personal character. It also speaks, with the eyebrow for its interpreter. Care should be taken when massaging the forehead to use rotary motion, ending either downward between the eyes or upward into the hair. A frown is not in keeping with a happy nature and should be the last to be broken. Do not allow your face to become more to remove such lines than any kind of massage. The muscles of the eyes are delicate and should be most carefully treated; never rubbed, but patted lightly. A most important muscle is the sphincter muscle of the mouth, the one which controls the beauty of expression. This is perhaps the most sensitive muscle of the face, for it is instantly affected by grief, joy, or mental strain; their story is told immediately by the expression of the mouth. In massaging these muscles gently rubbing upward from the corners of the mouth to the eyes is best, then three or four gentle movements from the corners of the mouth toward the ear.

A. L.: To keep blonde hair in good condition it should be washed about every three weeks. Here is a shampoo that is excellent for blonde hair: One tablespoon of latherine, three tablespoons of tincture of green soap, and the white of one egg. After wetting the hair and scalp thoroughly with warm water pour the shampoo mixture over the head and rub with it. Finger tips until a stiff lather is formed. Do this three times. This cleanses the scalp thoroughly and by bringing the blood to the minute vessels that nourish the scalp greatly benefits the hair follicles. Be sure to rinse the hair well; spray all the shampoo lotion out of it. If any soap is allowed to remain it will destroy the gold tint so much desired by blonde girls.

D. R. D.: There are many good eyebrow pencils on the market that you may use to darken your eye lashes and brows. I am sorry I cannot give you a permanent dye.

F. L. H.: I do not think the goosebumps had any effect on your hair. It is not injurious to the hair in any way. Every two weeks is not too often to wash your hair if it is oily.

SHE BRAVED NEW YORK WITH SHAKESPEARE

An Impression of Margaret Anglin, Drawn by Rhea Wells

Margaret Anglin Talks of Plays and Things; Will Keep Doing Revivals

Not so long ago Margaret Anglin gave Oakland a taste of Shakespeare in more or less modern guise. "As You Like It" was the play and how well this city did is now theatrical history. The other day Miss Anglin invaded New York with Shakespeare. Here is what she had to say to an interviewer on things theatrical in general:

"It's a far cry from 'The Merchant of Venice' to 'The Forest of Arden' truly a far cry! But, behold a miracle! On West Forty-fourth which a few short months ago was, according to report, turning 'em out from 'The Fight' and the ones in search of the same sensations down to its neighbor, 'The Lure', a few blocks away, is now swept clean of its iniquities and instead offers good old wine that needs no bush. Good old wine of the drama that, though cobwebs may incrust it, usually comes back with a sweet which many a banished politician might envy.

Banished dukes and 'heavenly Rosalinds' have with 'charming charm' and 'magnificence' by Margaret Anglin, with supporting company that is truly billed as 'notable', is one of the first harbingers of spring on Broadway.

Margaret Anglin in doublet and hose, which belied her very feminine disposition to murder her and her lovely husband, Howard Hull, had one little minute in her dressing room. It was more by way of greeting than professionally that I gained entrance.

"Rehearsals, rehearsals, rehearsals!" she cried. "Morning, noon and the night. Good you come for the interview on Thursday at 2? We can talk between scenes in the rehearsals of 'Lady Windermere's Fan'."

Never was such a dream of a Forest of Arden; never was such a winding, 'gentle river'. In the springtime one's fancy turns lightly to all lovely things that suggest immortal youth and the rebirth of beauty from the bier of dead winter. If you like it this 'As You Like It' is the most satisfying comedy of them all.

And Margaret Anglin herself is as optimistic as her own Forest of Arden in April. In her dressing room at close range she is prettier than she has been since she played in her appealingly beautiful role of Ruth in 'The Great Divide'.

"A brave person," she mocked, "to bring Shakespeare to town in the springtime after the reception he has been given here recently? Well, I don't know. I believe that New York likes good plays and art."

With a homely Rosalind trick of voice—"We've had such a good season on the road that we could give ourselves this indulgence for Lent."—this season went over the same route that I played 'Green Stockings' over season before last, and it was quite as profitable. In Canada and the Far Northwest they always are loyal to me because I am a Canadian.

"They love you because you are Margaret Anglin," Mrs. Sarah Crowley Le Moyne spoke up. It was at the rehearsal of the Wilde play, and in this Mrs. Le Moyne has the role of

"And instead of beginning in New York to see how they'd like us," Miss Anglin continued, "we did all our weary journeying on the road and have come home to rest."

"After 'Lady Windermere's Fan' which comes after the two weeks of Shakespeare announced, I shall make no more productions this season. NEXT SEASON, WHAT?"

"Next season I haven't decided on. I shall play, but I don't yet know productions, for the strain is too great on me. It takes it out of me. 'Shakespeare' is a person resting? No, not at all," she said. "Last September I did 'Sophocles' 'Electra' out in California. It was a tremendous production. The lines were the hardest I ever tried to learn. I used to be a wet towel around my forehead and saturate it with cologne and study hour after hour. To a person who has memorized the Greek translation of 'Electra' Shakespeare is as light as the frothiest comedy."

"Most people think that after Shakespeare the modern play is really play; well, after the real Greek drama no one who had memorized the former would think Rosalind's speeches or Katherine's a hard task to remember."

"Anyway, there's been nothing discouraging about our reception. The reviews have grown steadily. I am not one of those who think there's no prospect for better things on the stage. My experience has shown me that people still read and love Shakespeare. Though the country, where there are fewer directions and more leisure to read, naturally people are more familiar with the classics than they are as a whole in New York."

"Wasn't it Mr. J. M. Jones who said it was because the preachers approved of Bill Shakespeare so often and so emphatically that Broadway wouldn't have him? The people know what they want and good plays have no age. They are perennial."

"About revivals, maybe I shall keep on doing them. One thing is certain—I shall with I get a good play. The first good play that is submitted to me I shall produce. When I find a play as good as 'The Great Divide', for instance."

On the stage Marjory Maude, who is to play the graceful role of Lady Windermere in the revival of 'The Wilde play', was tearing imaginary roses to pieces. Pouring imaginary tea for Arthur Byron, who has grown in good looks and grace. He shines even at a rehearsal where every one is reading his part. Margaret Anglin moved nearer the footlights to suggest a piece of business to the stage manager. She is always on the alert. Nothing is too trivial in production for her to notice it.

"If she'd only talk about herself," Mrs. Le Moyne, who sat in the dark ened house, said, "then you'd hear some very wonderful stories of a very wonderful woman. She is so kind and thoughtful to every one on the road that even that part of the season isn't anything but pleasure."

Another member of Miss Anglin's company, Miss Williams, who has been with her several seasons, declares that Margaret Anglin is the hardest worked person she knows. "She is up every morning by 7," she said. "Last year when we were in California rehearsing 'Electra' Miss Anglin was up at 6 o'clock every day in the theater by 7 o'clock. She stayed there all day every day. For lunch she took sandwiches and for dinner the same. As long as I have been with her I've never seen her least bit interested in food. She will eat anything, but after 'Electra' she said she hoped she'd never see another one.

ENERGY IS TREMENDOUS. "I'm telling her," Miss Williams explained as Miss Anglin came back, "that you put everybody else to shame by your energy. That you get up every morning before 7 o'clock. 'Solly' knows as much about me as anybody," Miss Anglin laughed, and nodded to Miss Williams, "but she's mistaken if she thinks I set up because I like it. I'd never get up if I didn't have to. I know only one fashionable rule for success—work hard for both early and late. I've always had to do. I didn't produce plays this year, stage them and do everything because it was what I wanted to do. But I had to if I got them staged."

"Listen to those epigrams," she nodded towards the stage. "I can resist everything but temptation," Arthur Byron was declaring over his imaginary cup of tea to the languorous Lady Windermere.

"Curious how one finds Wilde's epigrams stolen and worked over and over and broken up, stuck here and there even in the newest books, but seldom credited to him. From the comic newspaper supplements on up you'll find that he had many admirers, though not all of them were generous or just in their borrowings from him."

"The always loved 'Lady Windermere's Fan' because it is such a perfect thing. It is as polished as an exquisite jewel. Yes, I've tried to make this revival worthy of the play. The people on the stage do seem like real people."

"A comic," a man on the stage was reading his lines, "is a man who knows the cost of everything and the value of nothing."

"Some one truly said," she continued, "that 'the turned the fairs of London' into rose gardens for his fans. Just now there seems to be a revival of interest in his writings. This is the first revival of 'Lady Windermere's Fan' in America since its production here in 1892."

"We'll have a rest of two minutes," the stage manager announced. The actress had been in rehearsing two acts of the play, dropped into cushioned chairs and took their ease. Not so Margaret Anglin. There was a telephone call to attend to. A row of design, and another to be fitted to her. And she had been at a rehearsal earlier in the day!

But Miss Anglin is looking so very well this season she doesn't show her fatigue.

"One can hide everything but a cold," she laughed, when she finally came back and the third act was under way. "I had a dreadful cold the opening night, and such an ulcer in my throat that I could scarcely speak."

"You that I could scarcely speak," she said, "to Miss Le Moyne, as the two listened to the dialogue; 'do you think they are getting that as it should be?'"

"Ask Mrs. Le Moyne about how to pronounce these words," the stage manager was directing some one to one side, while Margaret Anglin took Erin.

Again I repeat, since it is so very obvious, that Margaret Anglin is looking her best this season. She's lost much of the too, too solid flesh that hid her charming outlines—those of a slender girl—in her earlier plays. But this hard work—four Shakespearean productions with 'Sophocles' 'Electra'—has trained her down.

She belies her words spoken in the play, "I'm so by the cold light of day, as when there are pink shadows to the candles." She doesn't look 28. And so the afternoon wore on. Other actors had to stay to rest. But never does Miss Anglin rest. There are too many and important things to be seen to every minute. And yet she gets through it all.

HER ARDENT ADMIRER. There's a pleasant-faced German maid, who looks more like a governess, always waiting to see that she rests when she has time. There is Howard Hull, who has never had a hand in the same scene over if his wife is in it. He's so ingenious in his delight you'd think Miss Anglin was his debutante sister instead of a star with what the papers call an "established following."

"Yes, that's right," he agrees when in the last act of "As You Like It," she doffs her doublet and hose to swim in as a lovely white-robed, tulle-trimmed, orange-blossom-wreathed Rosalind. "Isn't she lovely? I'll go straight and tell her."

"Of course I won't forget it. That's what she works for—to hear such things as that. It's her reward. I shan't forget—An adorable Rosalind!"

And Margaret Anglin in her dressing room merrily powders him again. And is still glad about every good actor in her company receives.

"I'm happier than I've ever been," she says. "I think I have the nicest husband of them all. Yes, I'm very happy these days—now that 'The Taming of the Shrew' comes on the night, and then 'Twelfth Night'—and the revival of 'The Wilde play'."

"One is in a kind of tension until all the 'first nights' have passed. But I still contend," she said, an hour before the night performance of 'The Shrew' when she had had one minute's rest all day, "that New York does like Shakespeare. People that doubt it should come and see the houses we are having."

Here's Matrimonial School for Fathers-in-Law

"Let's have a bureau of matrimonial information where the prospective father-in-law may go to learn the 'dark' or the cheery side of the life of his daughter's fiancé, if he so desires," said City Magistrate John J. Freschi of New York. And most fathers will second the motion. But not alone shall he seek the purple past—the bureau shall inform him of the swain's financial standing and his ability to earn a salary sufficient to support his daughter in the manner to which she is accustomed. Likewise this bureau, advocated by Judge Freschi, would permit the amorous youth to take an inventory of his sweetheart's past life, obtain an idea of her temperament, her preference for saving or spending money and her social and mental desires. It all would be as simple as the ordinary card index.

Judge Freschi is competent to suggest, for he long has studied the question of domestic infidelity. With his recent years upon the bench and in his practice as a lawyer.

The judge would have us turn to the card index of John Smith, a would-be son-in-law. Perhaps John previously has been married and divorced, and his former wife has a child and her father want to know it. John, perchance, has been neglected when it comes to confessing the sins of a previous matrimonial sunset.

LONG A STUDENT OF MATRIMONY. Judge Freschi, one of the youngest city magistrates, has made a special study of marital problems in his work in the Court of Domestic Relations, and his unusual thoroughness, practical scheme to prevent undesirable marriages and the consequent loss of children with hereditary criminal taints or infidelity of parents which means neglect and resultant criminality among the offspring, is the result of his observations.

Directly, the plan of Judge Freschi is to establish a central bureau of statistics. In this bureau will be kept card indexes containing the names and addresses of all persons who, by reason of court, whether for abandonment, wife beating, cruelty, intoxication, vagrancy, drug using, dishonesty or crookedness of any sort. The card of each such individual will contain, besides his name and address, a record of his finger prints and full data as to his crimes. If there are extenuating circumstances they, too, shall be religiously catalogued.

The bureau would be a tremendous aid in securing better conditions, not only as far as the prevention of dangerous marriages is concerned, but in the way of preventing business schemes by crooks who, with no way of tracing their records, so often perpetrate frauds on a defenseless public. Magistrate Freschi outlined his suggestion thus:

"Does not let his daughter marry a man until he has done something toward ascertaining the moral character of that man. How does he go to work to conduct his investigation today, and how effective does it prove? He inquires around among the young man's friends—who are generally loyal to the young man, no matter what his character may be."

LEARNS OF HIS HABITS. "He asks his own friends what they think of the young man, and they think well of him—the young man has been clever to let them think anything else. And then the father, a loss how to investigate further, permits his daughter to marry a fellow who, for all he knows, may have been in jail as a cocaine fiend or a black-mailer or a crook of some other sort.

"Now, suppose the case to be a more radical one. The father has heard rumors about the young man. These rumors have had it that he was a drunkard and had been involved in a raid on a disorderly house and had been arrested for it."

"The father naturally wants to make sure he is not doing the boy an injustice, yet he feels he must be even more sure that he is not allowing his daughter to fall into the grasp of a degenerate. So he employs detectives."

"The detectives hunt up what they can about the young man, which usually is little, for to trace a criminal record years later is a difficult task, and finally they come back and report that they can find no proof of the rumors, and so the father permits the marriage, only to find later that his daughter is married to a hereditary criminal taint from their father or on to the offspring. It is a statistical fact that most of the young boys and girls who go wrong are the children of parents who have neglected them."

"The father of the greatest causes of child neglect is infidelity between father and mother. To go back, there is no stronger incentive to domestic unhappiness than a criminal or degenerate touch in one or the other of the principals."

"Then there is the matter of insanity. The city magistrates have the jurisdiction to send to the psychopathic ward at Bellevue for examination, as to their sanity, all persons whose actions warrant such a move. The other day I sent over a man and his daughter, both of whom asserted they had been hypnotized and were being persecuted by another individual. The old gentleman had a younger daughter of marriageable age. Now, I suppose the man who was engaged to marry her should have desired, and the bureau had been in existence, he could have gone there and asked if there was a record of the family. He would have learned that virtually all her family had gone insane at one time or another. I am not advocating any such idea that he instantly forsake the woman on that account, but a man knowing in plain that it was his right to know of the family taint of the person he was to marry his wife. How he acted upon it was his affair and hers."

"But there are still other uses such a bureau would have. It would be of immeasurable help to the judges. Nowadays, except in cases where the regues' gallery at police headquarters has the data, there is no way for a judge to tell whether a prisoner is

Nikola Tesla showed that it was possible years ago. We know that we can get ten watts of light over a distance of a few feet, but to get even so small a quantity over 10,000 watts must be radiated. Naturally, however, wireless lighting will be foolish, if not impractical, for lighting great cities in the midst of civilization. It will be valuable mostly for isolated places. GOSSIP FROM SAN FRANCISCO WEEKLIES

Maxine Elliott and "Mrs. Pat" Campbell

Approves the love affairs of the beautiful Maxine and the talented Mrs. Pat. At what age do the talented ladies of the stage cease to fall madly in love? So madly that they marry, even? The trip to the altar is supposed to be the supreme test of true affection and stage couple celebrities now and then prove true to the test and are "proud of it." If all the marriage ceremonies in the "divine" world took place in one sanctuary, the bridal couples married up in procession, now and then there would recur before the reviewing stand a striking looking bride with a familiar face. The spectators would behold her always grinning in the mood of a person who came from her last previous promenade; but she would always arrest attention by the note of unusualness about her. Beside her, each time, would be a nice happy looking bridegroom. Some style to him each time—if you could get along in years but she would always be beautiful and interesting.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell, known to fame by the cognomen of the husband of her youth, has just taken unto herself a new spouse—George Cornwallis-West. He is a kid of forty, she is fifty plus. He is known to fame as the son of Mrs. George Cornwallis-West, beautiful one of the "Hollywood" set, who was married when he was Prince of Wales. My how he did admire that lady until he saw Mrs. Langtry! The new groom's sister is the Princess of Wales, renowned for her physical loveliness. Another sister is a duchess—I forget her name—who tenaciously clings to her title to prevent her handsome, young, wealthy husband from marrying Gertrude Miller, musical comedienne, star wife of Lionel Lincoln, renowned and wealthy librettist of English musical comedy. Mrs. Pat's new husband likes loveliness, mature, for did he not once espouse Lady Randolph Churchill now in the sixties? She had the distinction of blazing the trail for American girls to marry European noblemen. Though her marriage with George Cornwallis-West brought her no distinction, except as the enslaver of an Apollo, she has the undeniable honor of being the mother of Winston Churchill, English politician whose brilliance of mind and initiative are acknowledged by friends and opponents to be a heritage from his American mother.

As for Mrs. Pat, the new bride, what do you suppose her first husband was? Nothing more or less romantic than "Pat" after some time of domestic felicity which was productive of two dear children with both of whom the dear bride has been indicted in mother's domestic torments (but that's another story). Mrs. Pat went upon the stage in the English provinces. After ten years she was recognized and launched as a London star. "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" was her vehicle, and she certainly made it in London, so good that all the English-speaking world proclaimed her a shining light of the drama. Mrs. Pat, an heroic death as a volunteer in the Boer war, since which his illustrious "ador" has lived an uneventful stage-gone existence. Behold her now leading forth to the altar, or being led there, by George Cornwallis-West. Bless you, my children!—Town Talk.

Statuesque One and Marriage Talk

Maxine Elliott, who is so unfortunate as to have to confess to forty-four on account of her ancestry about her age when she became prominent—is once more upon the verge of matrimony with a person who has not yet arrived at such discretionary years. Maxine is a ravishing beauty, always was and always will be. She has plenty of money, so years don't count. As Jessie McDermott of Maine she married her cousin, a nice young man with a good education who made the wheelwright in baseball. In California we are greatly interested in her because once she lived in Oakland where her sister Gertrude, now Lady Forbes-Robertson, once attended St. Mary's Seminary. Later on Maxine helped her young husband by keeping a boarding house in New York. Fate would not have it that way at all so she went upon the stage. Her rare beauty and refinement were wonderful and all the world knows the result of her nature. The zenith of the career of Nat Goodwin, her second husband, was during the period of her association with him as leading lady. He and she didn't get on, history says; so they parted. Maxine continued on her histrionic career, attracting many serious students of the drama. One was the late J. Pierpont Morgan who thought he discerned, besides her undeniable beauty, rare ability as an actress. He did much for her socially. Through him she met the late King Edward and Mrs. George Kettel who were charming to her. The Maxine Elliott Theater in Thirty-ninth street, New York, is said to have come by its euphonious name through the admiration of Mr. Morgan for the beauty of Miss Elliott and her worthy effort to elevate the drama. As Allan Dale, dean of American critics, said at the time of its dedication: "This is the way, girls, to do in the dramatic struggle. Work on and on and on. Your reward will be a theater named after you—or something like that.—Town Talk.

The Zeal of Willis; This Sounds Old

"The Zeal of Willis," ran Willis Polk's telephone. "Hello," said Willis. "Mr. Polk, I am a feminine voice, this is Mrs. Scoundo of the Women's Board of Directors of the World's Fair. 'What can I do for you?' asked Willis. 'We are collecting a fund,' said Mrs. Scoundo, 'a fund which will be used to take care of unprotected girls who come here during the Exposition. We should like you to contribute one hundred dollars.' 'Times are pretty hard,' Mrs. Scoundo, replied Willis, 'and you'd better let me think that over a bit.' 'But don't you believe in saving girls, as I do," said Willis. "Have me two Mondays for Saturday night." "Bang!" went the phone at the other end of the line.—Town Talk.

Make Way for the College Bred Farmer

Dean Hunt, of the College of Agriculture in the University of California, makes an appeal to the farmers of the State to give employment to the graduates of his institution. Dr. Hunt doubtless finds inspiration, or perhaps provocation for his appeal in the state of mind of the plain farmer who is prone to regard the college-bred agriculturist with grave suspicion, if not hostility. In homely phrase, our doctor puts it: "Every young man is born into the world with his clothes off." So to get a start he must work for wages when he comes to man's estate, and thus it follows, as Dr. Hunt writes, that "the University department of agriculture is compelled to act as a sort of employment bureau. It is one of the most difficult problems with which the Department of Agriculture of the University of California has to deal, it is the same problem that exists in the job and the man fit. Frequently graduates desire employment without any immediate prospect, open for which they are especially fitted. More frequently jobs are open with no student properly fitted for the responsibilities entailed. It is obvious that if the state is spending large sums of money in educating its sons in agriculture, it is important that satisfactory employment must be found for the state's effort will be wasted."

Now to remove the impression in the popular mind concerning the long-haired character of the college-bred farmer, Dean Hunt makes explanation that his graduates are nothing monstrous, but just plain people with a certain scientific polish, and to remove the prevailing misconception whose existence he has discovered from the tenor of his correspondence in connection with the employment of agricultural graduates, he writes that "college men are not a race by themselves. They come out of your homes. They have the hopes and aspirations which you gave them. Their nature has not been changed by going to college. They differ from the average run of young men of the same age only in being the picked men of the State in ability, industry, education and culture. They have not become molluscoides. They can endure any kind of hard work, and rather glory in privations, provided they are necessary and worth while. They can survive where the uneducated fail, because in college they have been taught how to care for their bodies. It seems necessary to add that in none of these particulars are our graduates at all different from the average run of those who study the classics, science, engineering or law. They all look alike, act alike and have the same general views of life. They are entitled to and expect to receive the treatment that is accorded to educated men."—News Letter.

Sterling Has Gone From Our Midst

George Sterling has left us. He started this week for New York and "a hazard of new fortunes." He will make the trip in leisurely fashion, seizing the opportunity to visit brother poets whom thus far he has known only through their works and through correspondence. In Bancroft, Nebraska, he will visit John G. Neihardt, author of "The Stranger in the Gates." In Springfield, Illinois, he will tarry awhile with Nicholas Vachel Lindsay, author of that wonderful poem "General Booth Enters into Heaven." In Louisville, Kentucky, he will be the guest of Cale Young Rice, the dramatic poet whose "A Knight in the Armament" and "Fortuna" are so admired by the discriminating. Rice has lately entertained Alfred Noyes, the distinguished young English poet. At Ann Arbor Sterling will deliver a lecture on the California poets, discussing Joaquin Miller, Mark Twain, Stoddard, Louis Robertson, Max Coltrinitz, Herman Schaeffer, Clarke Ashton Smith and others. And then, no for New York! The poet must to the metropolis. It is the law of the market place that he must find the great market place. Every minstrel feels the urge.

"And at night, upon the highway, near and nearer drawn. Seek in heaven the lights of London flaring like a weary dawn. And his spirit leaps within him to be gone before him then. Underneath the lights he looks at, in among the throngs of men."

Tennyson felt it, of course. Are there more fascinating incidents in the history of English literature than those which tell of these hopeful pilgrimages? Shakespeare going up from Stratford with the manuscript of "Henry and Adonis" in his pocket; poor doomed Chatterton trudging the high road from Bristol with the Rowley ballads, already discredited; Johnson, with his tragedy of "Irene," footing it from Lichfield in company of Davy Garrick; Goldsmith, winning from Dublin by the devious route of Leyden, Louvain and Padua, writing "The Traveller" on the way. Some of them went to conquer; some to die. To-day the adventure is essentially the same. Only the manner has changed. Sterling goes by the limited. His fame has preceded him. His three books are in many appreciative hands wherever he stops. A fourth will follow on his heels. But it is an adventure just the same. As a larger edition, a larger audience awaits him; will he conquer "the modern Nivens"? Will they hearken when he strikes his harp in the new Babylon? I think so. Sincerely I hope so. Good luck, George, and God speed!—Town Talk.

A Modest Lion Is Gen. Younghusband

General Sir Francis Younghusband, the hero of Thibet, hasn't allowed himself to be flattered very much during his brief stay here. His rank appealed to society more than his achievements, but he resisted many attempts at exploitation. He's a modest hero. His modesty was put to rather a severe strain the other day when a certain well known dapper captain in the lobby of the Fair-

"You must sit down and tell me where Thibet is and all about what you did there," she cooed. Younghusband sat.—Town Talk.

Art of Receiving During Lent

During the Lenten season when even the most devout Christians in social life are pleased with themselves if they improve their minds and manners as a sort of discipline for their morals, would it not be an excellent idea for some of our ladies to form classes in receiving and presiding at social functions? I regret to say that very few of them do so with any grace or distinction. I have seen many young ladies assisting at teas who behaved very much like "salesladies" on opening days in the big shops. Either they stand stiffly about, or perform their ornamental duties in a perfunctory, business way. If they attempt simulation they bear an unhappy resemblance to ill-bred young women at church fairs holding up the crowd to buy chances on undies or home-made china sets. While the talent to be a graceful hostess is a gift inborn, like tact, it can be cultivated.

It is said to have been in a restaurant. When at twenty-two she became a mistress of the White House she is said to have amazed experienced diplomats by her self-consciousness and queenly, amiable manner of receiving, and her remarkable freedom from impetuosity in her difficult position. Even now that she has married again and entirely withdrawn from the glare of political life, she is still a social success.

The distinguished foreigners who visit our country, Mrs. Catherine Ivanoff of this city is a lady whom our hostesses might study to their advantage. I have never seen anyone receive with her ease and grace. She has perfect poise and glows with the happiness of greeting her friends. She is charmingly impartial to her guests but gives each the impression of being the one most desired and honored. Of course she has a certain little foreign way all her own which American women could not imitate with success. Still as her cordiality never becomes gushing I would suggest her as a model for sincere study. The numerous semi-private affairs given make it almost an imperative need for ladies to know how to receive with grace. And in 1915 I hope the ladies on reception committees won't stand about like a board of directors at a country lodge party.—Town Talk.

Diamonds on Lovely Woman's Shoes

Lovely woman is the chartered libertine. We permit her to wear diamonds on her shoes. We may stop her shoulders, but she wears no lot. Now one learns that she will wear diamonds on her shoes, at the poet writes:

"When I first met Angelina She was full of grace; I declared I never had seen a more bewitching face. When she rose to speak— Roses mingled with the lilies On her damask cheek. From those features once so charming, All the beauty's fled. Painted creatures—so alarming— Flashed there instead! Bats and beetles—most appalling— Chased a butterfly; While a tattooed lizard's crawling Round about her eyes."

On the other hand, one learns from a Washington dispatch of a movement or protest, which is designed to check a growing tendency on the part of the American people to make the Easter season the occasion for displaying fashionable clothes; a movement was launched there the other day to form a "Society for the Prevention of Easter Devolution." The members of this society would pledge themselves not to wear new articles of clothing beginning with Palm Sunday until after Easter Sunday. In proposing the new society, the District of Columbia Christian Endeavor Union declares that the real meaning of Easter is often lost sight of nowadays because of the popular craze for the new and fashionable clothing, and predicts that the movement will vastly increase the calm devotional spirit of that season.

This appears to be an uncharitable excursion in the philosophy of clothes. Why should membership in a society to encourage the wearing of clothes promote a devotional spirit? Is a new bonnet inconsistent with piety? I am compelled to admit that the ecclesiastical authorities appear to regard the Easter hat as sinful or near sinful. So the Reverend George E. Burdett of this city said in a recent sermon:

"To many people the worst conceivable calamity is to be out of style. The burning question is 'What shall I wear?' This drama of human existence is one endless round of new clothes. What a costly travesty on religion is the fashion show, when hosts upon us at Easter. The celebration of the triumph of the Son of God over death is made the occasion for a universal dress parade. 'What shall we wear?' Is there not a more important question. 'What shall we be?' Is there not a more noble effort more worthy of the reason and power of an immortal soul than clothes, appearances, things?"—News Letter.

Ambassadors on Brakebeams

One learns from a Los Angeles dispatch that two "ambassadors" of the Sacramento-Yolo unemployed arrived on the brakebeams of a railway passenger train to visit the Los Angeles chapter of organized jobless, and invite them, in the name of "General Kelly," to join the "Union of the Unemployed" in the proposed on-to-Washington march. The ambassadors, "Major" R. L. Buck and "Captain" J. A. Moore, who described themselves as field marshals of Kelly's army, brought a letter dated at the Sacramento jail, protesting that the army was going on to Washington "in spite of hell." Buck and Moore, of the diplomatic corps, but otherwise unemployed, brought words of cheer to the comrades with more trouble in prospect for Sacramento being the news that the band of unemployed now camped on an acre of ground purchased in Sacramento county when they moved on to a tract of ten acres recently purchased, either continuing to sit within the city limits.—News Letter.

Mrs. George Pope and Society Diet

One of the most interesting features of modern life is the intensive interest that women take in the subject of diet. Even in the elder days when it was fashionable to "enjoy poor health," there was never manifested such a hectic interest in food values. In the languishing days of ladies with a pathetic droop, it was considered vulgar to discuss food. Girth and weight had nothing to do with this droop, although the fat were wont to complain more plaintively about the modicum of sympathy upon which the sick must subsist.

Now it is the fashion to be well, and the droop has gone back to the middle ages. The debonair stout must not be confused with the droop which was supposed to be the manifestation by the spirit which demonstrated the meanness of the soul.

When Mrs. George Pope returned from Europe, she brought back with her the triumph of the French artists, and of course every one showed the broader amount of enthusiasm for these pretties. But the real, undisguised, un-restrained, spontaneous interest was centered in the fact that Mrs. Pope returned from Europe more stylish than when she went over there. Did the women scurry off into whispering corners whenever Mrs. Pope appeared in another magnificent gown, and hold hands over its loveliness, and wonder whether Doreet or Poret, of some one else fashioned it? Not a bit of it. What they did was to get off by themselves and hold caucuses and decide on one who knew Mrs. Pope well enough to ask her how she did it, not how she achieved the gowns, but how she managed to acquire so slight a silhouette. When the word went around that a great European doctor had out-batted milk and baked potatoes with out butter, as the ideal diet for acquiring the proper lines without losing any beauty, there was more interest displayed than if Mrs. Pope had brought back a scheme for transmuting base metals into gold. A claim that will transmute base flesh into bone is of far more interest to women.

Now one frequently hears some woman who fancies that she is too curvilinear for fashionable good looks say: "I am trying Mrs. Pope's diet. Three days of the week I have a cup of black coffee and a piece of toast for breakfast, and for luncheon and dinner I have a baked potato without butter and a glass of milk. The other days I eat variety of food but showing any of the ill effects of diet." The more cockle who keeps pointing of the peace and power of the subject of diet in the conversational world of women, might fancy that the lady had just remarked that she had heard by private advice from Mexico that Villa is planning a little trip to California to put more tobacco into the tinajas, or something equally important. The group about her hang on her every word with breathless interest. Then the tension is broken by some one, who asks a question? The women on the outskirts of this dynamic group realize that something is happening here which they cannot afford to miss. Immediately the lady who is trying Mrs. Pope's diet finds herself the center of the room full of women. She must repeat the formula again, and then as the woman who is naturally thin remarks: "It's all right." No other subject can possibly compete in interest with a new diet. So great is the fear of flesh that no one with potential possibilities of a pound can afford to disdain interest. It adds to the complacency of the slender to know that a new diet is ready for them should avoirdupois steal a march; the grim conquerors of the flesh turn with delight to a new regime; and of course those who are overweight and underfed are constantly welcoming some new diet that lightens the way to slenderness.—News Letter.

Mrs. Clara Stocker's Troublesome Jewels

Mrs. Clara Baldwin Stocker's innocent prattle about her trinkets and her gossamer, her multitudinous millinery, her fripperies and furbelows, are a perpetual joy. When a woman wears diamonds on her shoes, some thoughtless people might put it down to vulgar ostentation of the new rich, but they would be quite mistaken as to Mrs. Stocker. Hers is simply the survival of the primitive temperament that is attracted by things that glitter. In the glass heads of the Equinox, or in the nose rings and bangles of the South Sea Islanders we perceive the early manifestations of this passion. In modern woman the same ruling passion is expressed in costly jewels at the cost of a king's ransom. The great masters understand. Goethe shows how the temptations, bewillings Marquette, and Gounod has given it to the operatic stage as the Jewel Song in "Faust." George Eliot, herself a woman, teaches the same lesson in "Adam Bede," where Hetty struts and preens herself in secret, lung with the jewels that ultimately compass her ruin.

It is not all beer and skittles being a millionaire. It is embarrassing, for instance, to be compelled to keep your shoes overnight in a safe deposit vault lest thieves make away with them, and it may be annoying to know that you are always attended by a policeman in disguise, not by reason of any personal delinquency of yours, but to protect the valuable freight of your car.

The ravine colors of her father, "Jackie" Baldwin—the red flag with a Maltese cross of black—will fly at the masthead of the yacht, "California," and she plans to sail through the Panama Canal, up to the 1915 Exposition in San Francisco. Why Katherine Didn't Come

Blaine Elkins and his wife passed through town recently, on their way to join the Joe Letters on the Letter yacht which is in Japanese water. Mr. and Mrs. Billy Hitt were invited to be of the party, but declined owing to the expectation of what old-fashioned people who haven't studied sex hygiene still blushing call an "interesting event." What a to-do there would have been if the former Katherine Elkins had visited on mighty personages. Contact with a young woman who might have been an actress wife if she wanted to room have shed us with awe.—Town Talk.

George Wharton James Unlimbers His Poetry

George Wharton James, the noted writer and lecturer, now of Pasadena, turns a fine flow of language on Oakland, urging that city to acquire as an important part of its park system, and as a memorial to Joaquin Miller, "The Heights" property overlooking the city, where the poet passed his declining years. He quoted the opinions of many eminent personages in testimony to Joaquin's genius, and among others he says Tennyson told him that "Columbus" is "the greatest poem expressive of a nation's destiny ever written in any age in any tongue." Then Dr. James unlimbers his rapid fire battery, and tells Oakland that "we, because we think we know him too well, his greatness as a poet dwarfed by our too close proximity to the man, question the dictum of these world-famed

Is It Same Man or Merely Coincidence?

The following is taken from Kipling's "Letters of Marjorie": "A Punjabi Sirdar, Har Dyal Singh, has reformed, or made, rather, Courts on the Civil and Criminal side; and his hand is said to be found in a good many sweepings out of old corners. It must always be borne in mind that everything that has been done was carried through over and under unlimited intrigue, for Joashpur is a Native State. Intrigue must be met with intrigue by all except Gondos or demi-gods; and it is curious to hear how a reduction in tariff or a smoothing out of some tangled cord had to be worked by shift and bribe. The Sirdar is a man of great intellect and a great deal of energy. He has been in the Himalayas, where he has got together a goodly collection of unknown. To the credit of the 'Punjab Province' be said, it is not easy to circumvent a Punjabi. The details of his work would be dry reading. The result of it is good, and there is justice in Marwar, and order and firmness in its administration.

'Tis a Sad, Sad Story, Mates!

It's a sad story, mates, and the men are just as bad as the women. The editor of the Pineville Ex-Exo sums up the situation thus: "If we are going to stand for our women folks wearing shadow and silk skirts and our younger women learning to dance the bolli weevil, Texas Tommy, tango, the bunny hug, the bear dance, the half-center and the backward hop, and so on down the line, the men folk might just as well leave their trousers and the whole lot to go to hades together."

Lure o' Spring Felt Down the Peninsula

Now that the lure o' spring is in the air, summer plans are shimmering, and down the peninsula one hears discussions of how best to spend the season that is dedicated to out-of-town. Here in San Francisco, the whole blessed year is out-of-doors season, so we cannot use the terminology that is perfectly good elsewhere. Here, instead of distinguishing the season as out-of-doors, we must dub it as out-of-town. Of late years very few people who live down the peninsula way have closed their houses during the winter, preferring to keep the country home open the year around. But just because so many week-ends during the winter are spent down there, it does not offer a complete enough change during the summer, and so the chateaux of those magnificent estates are all planning some summer expedition that shall present a real contrast. The Walter Martins are

Country life down the peninsula has, for the most part, become so formal and so embowered with all the trappings of town life that, save for the occasional one of the life there and in town. There are very few people who manage their country households with any degree of difference from the city establishments. The Russell Coles, who have a country place down at Los Gatos, where they live the year round, and where they entertain in a most unique manner, are exceptions to this rule. The Coles often surprise their guests by leading them to a table set with carved wooden place plates, the service plates of the wooden variety that can be chucked into the great open fireplace at the end of each course. At least one course is cooked over these glowing embers, and the steaks and chops broiled by the world of "hot-broiled" are famous the world over, for many a distinguished guest, lured by the omnipotence of organic service, has carried away as his most delightful memory of California a steaming hot steak and a hot water bottle. Ethel Gregg Plans Quiet Wedding

The confirmation of the engagement of Miss Ethel Gregg to Mr. Dalton Mann will shortly be followed by a wedding announcement, for Miss Ethel intends to have the same sort of quiet, unostentatious wedding as did the Stewart Haldorns. Dalton Mann was present at the ceremony, when included, besides the bride and groom, Mrs. Murray, the groom's mother, Wellington Gregg and Miss Ethel Gregg. Further confirmation that Dalton Mann was to be a member of the family of the Greggs, was really not needed, although at that time his presence in this intimate family group was explained on the ground of his friendship for Haldorn, not on the score of his interest in the younger daughter of the household.

Mrs. Wellington Gregg is still confined to her apartments at the Fairmont, where she has been under the doctor's care for months for severe heart trouble which necessitates staying in bed. The Greggs bought one of the best sets of sea views, which commands all the wonders of the seacoast, and were planning to build a handsome house out down the peninsula. Mrs. Gregg's illness has necessitated a postponement of that plan. The Manns are planning to set up their household goods in an apartment like the Haldorns have done, and it is possible that they will be in the same apartment house if they can find suitable quarters there.—News Letter.

Those Lazy Girls and That Home

James A. Vanliggitt, addressing the Oakland Rotary Club the other day, declared that California girls are too mental and physical characteristics, but as employees they are lazy. They have no desire to work at anything like their capacity. Fathers make too much money in California. The daughters feel that they do not have to work, and our great trouble is to weed out the girls who want to work just long enough to buy a dress or hat. We try all sorts to get them to make more money, but they'd rather talk of how kindlike "Jimmy" looked last night. They seem to have no sense of money valuation in relation to service.—News Letter.

Immediately there arose a loud roar from the Oakland department stores. "Isn't so," said Miss Hauto, for instance. "We have other troubles besides 'Jimmy's' of 'Willies.' We are earning livings, and the real working girls—and these form the majority of those in the big houses, have all they can do to buy bread, as well as the hats the speaker so bitterly rails against. He doesn't know anything about the working girl."

Longs to Be Actress; in Sheet Rope Start

SOUTHS NORWALK, April 11.—The police sent out a general alarm for Mrs. Louise Lath, who stole away from her home by leaving her child in her bed room window with a rope she made out of the sheets from her bed. Mrs. Lath recently begged her parents might become a career at a motion picture house. Her friends say she ran away to become an actress. Her parents have placed the case in the hands of the police.

"Indiana Push" at Stanford

For years Stanford has been dominated by a group of men brought out to California by Dr. David Starr Jordan, and known from the section which produced them as the "Indiana push." They were poorly selected, most of them of mere high school culture and brought out here to fill positions as they have spent most of their place holding onto their jobs. For years they have had the younger and more progressive members of the faculty thoroughly cowed. This is a situation with which the alumni of Stanford are well acquainted, although loyalty to their Alma Mater has prevented most of them from discussing it. The trustees have now initiated a new policy. In pursuance thereof they are giving deserving men pay according to their rank. A secret classification of the faculty was made according to their standing, which was immorally fixed.

Not altered. But for the purposes of salary they were regrouped. A new rule giving a minimum salary respectively to full, associate and assistant professors, with a bonus for those of extraordinary merit, was then applied to the new classification. Not a single member of the "Indiana push" gets an extra dollar, so their status, as impartially fixed, may be imagined. Men promoted through favor, the Jordan regime, will be allowed to hang on until retired. What the new policy was put into effect a howl went up. The "Indiana push" held secret meetings and chattered and plotted. They said it was a "push" because it was another blow. They were made to work. One of them, at the head of one of the biological departments, had arranged to give to lectures at all but merely to "supervise" his department. He now has to lecture the minimum of seven hours a week.

It may safely be said that when Dr. Branner retires next year a president will be appointed who will make some more important reversals in policy. Among other things, the number of students will be limited, and instead of raising the entrance requirements, each applicant will have to show a satisfactory character. Preference will be given to poor students, as Stanford has none of the heavy fees and charges that largely support the best of the colleges. At the end of the freshman year, the number of students will be cut down to about one-third, those who are not selected to be given full credits to enter other colleges. Another measure taken will be the cutting away of expensive courses for the special preparation of teachers which can be better done in other places. The departments in German, Latin, Greek, French, etc., will be made departments of general culture without specialization.—Town Talk.

Promoting Chemical Purity in San Berdo

San Bernardino has instituted municipal dances and proposes to have them planned by a policeman. Perhaps the precaution is not superfluous, because a local writer, describing what he saw, tells of "wriggling their shoulders just like snakes" doing this "new tango stuff." But under too jealous eye of the police the municipal dance is said to promote the chemical purity of the city. Perhaps the chemical purity is not always what it is cracked up to be. At least the Redding Searchlight unkindly points the finger of scorn at the long felt wants of its neighbor, Red Bluff. It made

1. One or two less newspapers. 2. At least one first-class hotel. 3. Fewer revivals—more Christians. 4. Less mental purity, higher spirituality. 5. Less Psalm singing, but more music in the soul. 6. Enough first class people to fill the empty towns. 7. The removal of "whited sepulchres" to the cemetery. 8. Lots enough white men to match the enterprise of the Jans and Chinks. 9. More culture and wisdom for those who would be the moving spirits in things social and moral. 10. A chance to exhibit a legitimate thirst without resorting to concocted swam-root or cellar whiskey. 11. A general dissemination of the information that the Civil War is over. William Franklin and the the extension of the war.

Let us pray for the chemical purity of our neighbors.—News Letter.

NO BATH IN 20 YEARS. COURT GIVES HIM ONE

SAN JOSE, April 11.—VILIAM KNAUS, 65 years old, who says he quit bathing 20 years ago, was yesterday ordered to bathe in the Berkeley Jail, having out a fine of $10. Police Magistrate Underwood, before whom Knaus was taken Tuesday by Chief of Police Stockey, reminded the delinquent in baths he had seen his face before. "You are up here four months ago and I told you how to bathe a bath," declared Magistrate Underwood. "Sire, Your Honor, I know it, but what was the matter?" replied Knaus. "I asked several ladies for hot water and they ran me off that premise. I couldn't bathe in none water could I?" "Well," retorted Magistrate Underwood, "I gave you 15 days on the rocks. You are out here now. You have been out of jail ten days. I give you a dollar for each day since that you haven't taken a bath."

VITAGRAPH PLAYERS in "THE HERO"

Inside Facts About Photo-Plays and Players.

What is it that you want to know about the motion picture world?

Do you want to know something about the life of your favorite actor and actress outside the films?

Do you want to know how the play that particularly thrilled you was produced?

Whatever your questions concerning photo-plays and players, write Film and Screen, in care of this paper. Answers to such questions will be given in these columns.

SCENE FROM THE NEW KLEINE
PRODUCTION, "SPARTACUS" G. KLEINE

Gossip of the Silent Players.

That picture in which Max Acheson comes sliding down a slippery roof and falls into a barrel may be funny, but it was never intended by the scenario writer. That stunt was "put over" by Harry Metcalfe, the comedian who plays opposite Max in Joker comedies. Harry sprinkled the roof and he arranged the barrel beneath the eaves. Of course, it was too good to cut out of the film, and Max himself has gotten over being "sore" by this time.

A Brazilian sculptor is said to be making a plaster cast of John Bunny. John has been in the "movies" so long that the chiseler is having the time of his life making him hold still.

All the adventures of these motion picture actresses cut west do not get on the films. A Sioux Indian is said to have fallen madly in love with Anna Little (Broncho), and presented her with a bear. Billie Rhodes (Kalem) used her ventriloquist powers recently with the result that a big Indian, being used in the pictures, was half scared out of his wits. The red man while passing within a few feet of the little actress was sure that he heard the warning note of a rattler. Mr. Indian, before that section of the film was cut out, was shown to make a jump of six feet into the air.

The cause of that streak of "killing threads among the gold" right in the middle of King Raggs' forehead is no longer a mystery. King takes it upon himself to write practically all of his own scenarios.

Myrtle Gonzalez of the Vitagraph company calls attention to the fact that there are two "e's" in her name—which means esmeralda Spanish. It was Paul de Longpre who first discovered the varying expressions on Myrtle's face. She is a Los Angeles girl.

Rosemary Theby (Lubin) doesn't think much of the censors. She did not like it a bit because of what they did with the "Reincarnation of Karma." Rosemary is kept pretty busy jumping from one part into another, but when she does have an idle hour she usually spends it on horseback.

What do you suppose Jane Wolfe (Kalem) has for a hobby when she gets away from in front of the camera? No, she does not ride horseback, fence, swim, box, or any of those things. She designs bungalows! And she has just erected two in Glendale, Cal., that have won enthusiastic praise from the architects of that state.

"O, look!" exclaimed Bessie Eyton of the Selig Stock company in Los Angeles, while on a train recently with Director Campbell's company in northern California, "what is that white stuff coming down out there?" The truth of the matter was that while Bessie has had all kinds of experiences playing photo-play parts in sunny southern California, she had never seen snow in her life before.

Dave Thompson is still walking around with a kink in his back that won't come out. Dave recently played the part of a 70 year old man in the Thanhouser production, "The Golden Wedding." It took a week to finish the picture, and Dave says that he'll be darned now if he can straighten up.

Barbara Tennant has decided that she will have to do a bit more practicing if she is going to continue in "farmer's daughter" roles. The other day she was supposed to climb to the top of a haystack, but not being familiar with haystacks, came tumbling down head-first. Fortunately she was not injured.

Some body sent Francina Billington a pair of guinea pigs the other day and now all her friends are accusing her of entering into opposition to Selig's wild animal farm.

Mary Pickford has just finished "Hearts Adrift," which was the first play she has done while with the Famous Players at Los Angeles. Upon Miss Pickford's arrival on the coast, by the way, she and her mother were given a reception by Edwin August which was attended by many studio celebrities. Mary, Pickford, Vivian Prescott, and Lillian Gish all worked together once as stage children. The fact that Mary is 19 will give a clue as to the ages of the other two. Lillian Gish is now with the Reliance company.

"Valley of the Moon" has just been completed by Hobart Bosworth and company, including Myrtle Stedman of the Selig company, at Catalina Islands.

Lillian Wiggins is going abroad. The Paris leading woman at St. Augustine wills for Europe in March to play with the French company.

"Bobbie" Burns is now with the Mutual.

"The film determines an actor's ability," says Jack Raymond. "None can say the motion picture is a business—it is an art."

Wally (Lubin) is a fiend for motoring, and when he gets behind the wheel he buys with her own savings. The other day he was so fast that he had to drive slow enough to be seen.

KATHLYN
WILLIAMS

KATHLYN WILLIAMS, famous as the heroine of "The Adventures of Kathlyn," is the leading lady of the Selig Polyscope company. She was born in Butte, Mont., and spent her early life there. During her senior year in high school the failing of family fortunes compelled her to start out to seek her own, which she did with a modesty and force of energy that soon demonstrated her superiority in mastering whatever she undertook.

Miss Williams' charm of face and grace of figure, her poise and histrionic resourcefulness attracted the attention of a Western theatrical manager and he engaged her for small parts in a Butte playhouse. She had not been on the stage long before she was observed by Senator Clark, the copper king, who made inquiries about the young girl and offered to polish the rough diamond. Through Senator Clark's generosity Miss Williams was sent to the Franklin Sargent Dramatic School in New York, where she studied two years with such avidity and to such advantage that she accomplished wonders and was, at her graduation, accorded the position of leading woman with a dramatic company.

William N. Selig, seeing Miss Williams on the stage, recognized her capabilities and engaged her as leading woman for his stock company in Chicago. Miss Williams immediately entered into the new work with a zest that made her a valuable acquisition for the serious side of the motion picture business. Having run the gamut of the sentimental and tragic heroines, Miss Williams became the favorite in a new sort of drama in which wild animals figured vitally and pictorially. The beasts of the jungle prior to this time had never been brought into the line of the camera without steel bars between.

Miss Williams is of the Anglo-Saxon strain—fair haired and blue eyed. Hers are the blue eyes that never fear or falter, and so it was conceded that she was past mistress in all plays that required unusual risk and daring. It would be a twice-told tale to tell of her daring escapes when lost in the jungle, where the leopard leaped upon her and was driven off only by strenuous efforts of husky supernumeraries; of her adventures alone and unarmed with savage black-maned African lions; rides on the back of an elephant ripping through the jungle!

The difficult and unexpected of this trig, firmly knit, resourceful, intrepid gentlewoman, who has the classic cast of heroic face, with nothing suggestive of feminine fear. She has been in all sorts of predicaments—from a flight in the hydroplane and a fall in the lake, to the collision of a train and the wrecking of a locomotive. These dangers have not been met, passed or overcome without unusual risk, but Miss Williams has met them all.

Notes of the Motion Dramas.

Following closely on the production of "Quo Vadis," "Last Days of Pompeii," and "Anthony and Cleopatra" comes "Spartacus," which George Kleine has just started in Rome. Mr. Kleine, returning to Chicago recently, had some interesting incidents to relate of the labor and expense involved in his latest venture. Thirty-five hundred persons were employed in the ensemble scenes, Mr. Kleine finding little difficulty in obtaining people among the unemployed who could act.

"Give a native Italian a costume," says Mr. Kleine, "and you have an actor. It doesn't seem to make much difference that your centurion of today was the pill box of yesterday—the Italian is a natural pantomimist. The natives are not only used as actors but under the direction of the stage carpenters are kept busy for weeks in advance of the staging of the big scenes, helping to erect the stadiums. Of course, every actor must have a costume, and the job of the head seamstress is a big one. On her devolves the responsibility for absolute accuracy of detail and she and her assistants at the sewing machines are busy for months in advance of the making of the picture."

A moving picture staged in and around a dirigible balloon has been produced at the Universal Pacific coast studios. Scenes for "A Flight for Life" were taken in the balloon at the height of 2,000 feet. The veteran aeronaut, Roy Knabenshue, manipulated the balloon, a 150 foot twelve passenger dirigible.

"Napoleon," made by Cines, will be placed upon the American market by George Kleine, March 10. Throughout the picture runs a love story centering about the evil influence exercised by the famous Mme. De Longueville and a certain baron of ill repute in the history of France.

A little crowd of 20,000 spectators witnessed Romaine Fielding (Lubin) stage the battle scenes in "The Golden God."

In the making of a three reel special, "Baffles, the Gentleman Burglar," Keystone had a near tragedy. The Keystone police force was chasing Baffles over the roofs of the skyscrapers when one of the officers, just as he was about to shoot, slipped on the edge of the roof, and for a time it looked as though he was going over. The cop struggled back to safety, however, and the camera kept right on going.

ness to Clash Between Two NationsMEXICO CITY, April 11.—Strict censorship was established on all outgoing messages from Mexico City at 9:30 o'clock this evening.This is the entire contents of a dispatch received tonight at New York from a correspondent in Mexico City. In view of past moves of the Huerta government it is believed the action may have been taken to prevent the dispatch of important news.WASHINGTON, April 11.—Tampico and Torreon were the danger points in the Mexican situation tonight. At either place it was admitted here any sudden change in the situation might precipitate a crisis that would force the hand of the United States.So grave was the outlook that Secretary Bryan remained at his desk until a late hour. Secretary of the Navy Daniels left orders with Rear Admiral Fiske, chief of the bureau of information, that all dispatches bearing on Mexican affairs were to be sent to his house as soon as received.While President Huerta has announced the withdrawal of his army from Tampico, the incident was far from being closed tonight.Huerta is conducting an investigation. Pending his conclusion the demand that the American flag receive a salute of twenty-one guns from the federal forts at Tampico is held up.But it is believed to be certain that so soon as the inquiry ends Rear Admiral Mayo will insist that the salute be accorded. Naval precedent demands this. There is little doubt felt in naval circles that the Mexican federals will agree to do so of their own accord.CONFLICT WAS NEAR.
This incident, however, has served to emphasize on how slender a thread hangs trouble for the United States.
Had the army taken Tampico, a properly handled and apology made, Mayo would have been compelled to raise the federal flag at Tampico. And there are grave fears entertained by officials in close touch with the situation that another such incident may soon force the outcome to be more serious.But it is not alone from Mexicans that danger is threatened. The international aspect of the Mexican situation is a factor in the night than in many other times.Mandate, through Ambassador Willard at Madrid, today that its citizens everywhere in the Constitutional territory be protected. This government is asked to use its good offices to see that this is done.Carranza has absolutely declared that he has no intention of making any concessions. The latter has made two peremptory demands that Carranza force Villa to respect the rights of Spaniards in the territory that he occupies. But the demands have been ignored, not even having been accorded the courtesy of a reply.Secretary Bryan tonight admitted that he had no reassuring information on this subject and for the first time it was evident that the Spanish situation was troubling the president.MORE WORK FOR BRYAN.
England and Germany have put protection of their enormous financial interests at Tampico squarely up to this country. Bryan insisted tonight that he was doing everything he could to force both forces here to direct their fire away from the intersection. Admiral Mayo's demands on both sides have been peremptory.But there is a real fear that should the federal flag be forced to be Tampico, they may decide to abolish all of the foreign property there before doing so, in the hope that the hands of the United States will be forced.On the other hand there is the possible knowledge here that the Constitutionalists look on the British, almost as much as the Spaniards, as their enemies. That they may demand some good reason why British or even German property, should not be confiscated if they take the city.No word of the final outcome of the savage fighting near San Rodrigo, fifty miles northeast of Torreon, has reached here. Secretary Bryan has said that his advisers show the battle is even more bitterly contested than at Torreon. But he has positively declined to make public the text of his messages from Consul Hamn, who is at Torreon as an observer for the state department.READY TO LAND.
VERA CRUZ, Mex., April 11.— Only by a hair's breadth was the landing of United States marines in Tampico averted. It was reported today, when details of an officer and men from a whaleboat of the Dolphin, by the Mexican federalists was received.General Mas, military governor of Vera Cruz, is making every effort to obtain full details of the arrest and the removal of the federalist leader

Warships christened with water, fears, are expected to become a reality in the United States navy in the very near future. The individual responsibility will be Joseph dence of the secretary of the navy while the secretary may not be able to force private constructors of war craft to use water instead ernment-built vessels is absolute.It is expected that the secretary will issue his order to that effect in the near future. He has made it very plain that he does not intend to be swayed from his intention of making the navy "dry" by

KIMONO MAN IS DEEPStrange Night Visitor Figures in Shooting CaseHAYWARD, April 11.—Who was the mysterious midnight visitor who, disguising himself, it is supposed, that it was a man—in a kimono, paid midnight visits to the home of Joseph C. Bettencourt before the latter was shot, he declares, by John C. Simons, now on trial for the shooting?What is a man or a woman?
What connection had the mysterious stranger with the queer shooting and its subsequent mysterious happenings?These are some of the questions court and attorney tried to solve yesterday when Simons again faced the court of Justice of the Peace Charles Prowse, charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder.Judge Prowse endeavored to pacify a large crowd, which he had barred from his court room during the hearing. The law says that a courtroom should be open, and the crowd of curious listeners gathered. The courtroom, however, had been condemned as a place for a large audience by the court.Many are today threatening legal action, and the judge is busy trying to explain.SIMONS MAKES CHARGE.
Bettencourt, who claims to have been wounded by Simons, whom he declares shot him, tells a peculiar story of a man, wearing a kimono, in trying to trace this "mystery" man, who he says was a mysterious man, found later to be Simons.The defendant declares that the shooting took place following the discovery that Bettencourt, who was employed as a watchman on the Meek road, was the man, Simons, during his husband's absence.The story of the kimono-clad man has caused complications in the case which Assistant District Attorney Walter J. Burpee and Attorney B. J. Lyman, for the defense, argued out at length yesterday without result.Bettencourt on the witness stand, declared that previous to the shooting Simons assaulted him. He had heard, he declared, that a man disguised as a woman had entered his house, and resolved to investigate.Summoning Deputy Sheriff Joe Soares to the scene, he declared that he declared that he made a search, but could not locate his visitor. He walked alone the road near his home, he said, suddenly to discover that a man was following him, and, when the latter drew abreast, declares that he turned to discover that it was Simons.REVOLVER DRAWN.
Simons declared from a revolver on him, and Bettencourt, ordered him to "put it up.""I told him that he couldn't frighten me that way," declared the watchman. "The man then shot at me, I fell. As I attempted to rise Simons beat me, and then felt my heart to see if I was dead. He left me lying in the road."William Lewis, a neighbor of Bet-tencourt, corroborated the story of the kimono-clad man. He declared that after seeing the nocturnal visitor he called on Bettencourt.Frank Barnett and Deputy Sheriff Soares told of their investigations into the supposed wound of the kimono, and Dr. U. C. Billingsley testified to having treated Bettencourt's injuries.

Has No Federal Job and Is EligibleLetters sent out by a faction opposing the office of chairman of the State Democratic Central Committee, and which called for a not answer from the official, have been received at Democratic headquarters, and indicate that a spirited fight will take place on the floor of the committee meeting to be held at the Hotel Oakland Tuesday morning.Campbell was urged as a candidate for the office of chairman when, Collector of the Port J. O. Davis, instructed him to do so by Secretary Mc-Adoo, gave up the chairmanship. The letter, rehearsing this fact, charges that Campbell is no longer eligible for the chairmanship, having been appointed "Receiver of Oils," a federal position.Campbell declares that there is no such office, and that in one case where he acted as a receiver of an oil company it was by court appointment, and not by federal choice. Secretary McAdoo had ruled that no federal employee should take a party organization office.ALLEGED FACTIONAL CONTROL.
The letter, to which Campbell has taken exception, urged Democrats to "discourage factionalism in the party," and sets forth that "as Mr.
Campbell has accepted of a federal position he should not seek more honor,
The Democratic party is not strong enough to place two honors in the hands of one man and besides this tends toward factional control of the party."Campbell's reply, which will be read on the floor of the convention, is to the effect that the letter has been issued with an intent to decline, that he is not a federal officer, that he was named as his does not exist, and that the only possible ground for the charge is that he is a court receiver."This job may last for a year, and it may only last for a day," he declares. "It is no federal job anyhow, and this letter is purely and simply a device to deceive members of the party."BELL FOR CAMPBELL.
In the meantime a spirited contest is expected over the chairmanship.
The letter attacking Campbell's eligibility for the office was signed by C.
W. Millon and E. B. Warmouth.
Other candidates have come forward, and according to party gossip, Campbell is favored by Theodore Bell and J. O. Davis, while Judge Andrews, of Red Bluff, his strongest opponent, is backed by J. Scott and Gavin Mc-Nab.Grace B. Calkin of Berkeley is making a strong fight for the see-ondaryship of the club. W. A. Powell so far is her only opponent, but local Democrats are urging Daniel Hayes, assistant secretary and office manager of the Jefferson Club, or his brother, William Hayes, both young Oakland attorneys, to get into the fight. So far they have refused to do so, but friends declare that strong pressure is being put on them to enter the race, and southern democrats will back them, as well as the full strength of the Jefferson Club.Should they decide to run, Mrs. Calkin's candidacy is sought by the County Women's Democratic Club.
The state organization is divided.
The fight between Mrs. Calkin and other of the Hayes brothers would be a tremendous one. If they do not run it is openly predicted by the local organization that Mrs. Calkin will be elected.PREPARE FOR BANQUET.
Preparations were completed last night for the big banquet which will end the meeting day. This, to be known as the "Jefferson Club Ban-

FATALITY TRAMPLEDBody of Woman Declared to Be Victim of Criminal Operation, Exhumed.PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 11.—Following a lengthy secret conference between Detectives E. E. Clark and Detective E. E. Clark and their assistants in investigating the "House of Mystery," Miss Lucy D. Orr, head nurse at the Dr. C. C. Meredith's maternity institution, was arrested, charged with murder, and placed in the county jail without bail. The information did not state any specific case, but it was understood to have been in connection with the death of Mrs. Myrtle Allison.It is understood that more than a score of women were picked up in the streets by county detectives tonight and taken into the conference.
A number of them were held in confinement, but it was understood to have been in connection with the death of Mrs. Myrtle Allison.That was the question uppermost in the minds of the district attorney and his chief aide, the Rev. E. E.
Clark, head of the county detective force, tonight. Articles of clothing found in the "house of mystery" after the raid showed by differences in cut and tailoring that they belonged to many women. Only one of them has been identified—that of a woman called Mrs. Myrtle Allison.Where were the women who wore the assortment of articles found?
Jackson was asked."Now you are getting warm," he replied smiling.The facts as established by Dr. J.
C. Welch of Bellevue, Undertaker O.
J. Goetz, of this city, and Baxter, were said to have clinched the portion of the evidence made by Dr. H.
F. Lutz, chief informant against Meredith, according to Mrs. Allison.Lutz said that it was at 1 o'clock on the morning of March 18, 1913, that he turned Mrs. Allison over to Meredith at his (Lutz's) office in the city of Pittsburgh.On the day after Lutz said he had died, asked him how Mrs. Allison's case of septic poisoning was progressing, and was informed that Mrs. Allison was "gone." The poisoning of Mrs. Allison, Lutz set forth, resulted from a criminal operation performed by Meredith.REMAINS DUG UP.

dressed to every important organization in the United States, and bearing personal letters from Mayor Mott, President Harmon Bell of the Commercial Club, and other public men, were late last night placed in the Oakland postoffice, to carry to all corners of the nation Oakland's bid for the conventions of the country.The six hundred invitations are all issued to organizations with which the Commercial Club has already been in touch, and many of these are, according to the club officials, already favorable to this city as their convention city for 1915. The great bundle of mail, according to the club officials, means millions of dollars to come to this city.The letters were signed in the Commercial Club headquarters by Mayor Mott, President Harmon Bell, O. E.
Hotte, a director of the club, and Managing Director Joseph E. Caine.
The invitations made a great pile on the floor of the Commercial Club, which was already crowded with invitations for the big meetings.WORK OF MONTHS.
These are not letters sent out at random to every organization we could find the name of," declared Caine. "The getting of the names of the organizations was a carefully prepared work, lasting several months.
We have already been in contact with officers of them all, and these invitations are the formal beginning of negotiations in each case. Of course, this does not mean that we will get them all, but I can promise a large number. In fact there are a few already absolutely clinched for Oakland, and I will be in a position soon to announce these.""This is a big work," declared Mayor Mott, "and these letters mean more to the city than many may imagine."The secretary of each organization was forwarded a personal note from the mayor, setting forth Oakland's attractions, promising cheer and on the part of the city in making the particular convention invited a success, and extending the official invitation in the name of the city of Oakland.The letter from the Commercial Club officials, also setting forth the attractions of the city extended a welcome in the name of Oakland's business men to the convention, and to be completed by 1915, was described and offered free of expense to the meetings. Hotel accommodations were outlined, and copies of the new "Convention Fact Book" were included in the mail.The pile of letters, when ready for mailing, weighed 600 pounds, and was carried to the postoffice in a deliv-was crowded at the time and persons ran in all directions to escape. Mrs.

injured that she died tonight at the along Bancroft way at 4:30 p. m., when approaching Shattuck avenue, a college student car passed. The horse took fright and started a mad dash down Bancroft way. Mrs. Edwards saw the approaching animal too late to get out of its way and McKay was powerless to stop it.The woman was borne to the ground, the animal dashing past her and kicking her in the head as it passed. Her skull was fractured, and she was discovered at the hospital, where she was taken, and from this injury she died this evening, five hours later.

With her husband she had resided at 2530 Bancroft way. The Edwards family came here a week ago from Fresno, where he was engaged for years in teaching. Mrs. Edwards was 50 years of age.McKay, after bringing his horse to a stop, returned to the scene of the accident, but the woman had already been taken to the hospital. Followtaken to the police station and later released pending a decision as to what

QuartetNEW YORK, April 11.—The four gunmen convicted of the murder of Thomas Rosenthal must die.Goff of the Supreme Court tonight denied the application of their counsel for a new trial. They were the last hope of these men that they might be saved from the chair.Monday is the day set for the execution of the gunmen in Sing Sing prison. The men who will go to their death are:"Gyp the Blood," Harry Horowitz.
"Dago," Frank Crofici.
"Jeffy Louie," Louis Rosenberg.
"Whitely Lewis," Jacob Siedenschnur.The hearing started with a senation when a young man, who gave his name as Gustav Beck, was examined by Justice Goff after he had sided into the courtroom and landed the justice a note.A court officer was immediately ordered to bring him back. Beck was sworn and said a man outside had given him the note. Justice Goff refused to divulge the contents of the note, but said it "looked like a threat of some sort."RECOGNIZED GUNMEN.
District Attorney Whitman subjected the witnesses called by counsel for the gunmen to grueling cross-examinations.Karl Dresner, a waiter and bartender, declared he was in front of the Garden restaurant on the night of July 13th, three nights before the Rosenthal murder, when Bridget Webster, Harry Vallon and Jack Rose came alone. Dresner explained that he knew all of these men as well as Rosenthal. Soon after the gunmen appeared, Rosenthal came out of the restaurant with his wife. He then said he heard a shot."Here he comes. Now, put it over on him."Dresner testified that on the morning of July 13, 1912, he was standing at Fifth street and seventh avenue from 1 o'clock until shortly before 2 o'clock a. m. This was three days before the murder. He said he saw Rose, Webster and Vallon in front of a cafe and heard Rose urge Webster and Vallon to "put it over on Rosenthal" when the latter emerged from the place with his wife.Coming down to the time of the murder, Dresner swore that he was standing on the steps of the Elks Club, which is diagonally across the street from the Hotel Metropole, where Rosenthal was killed, when he heard shots, and then a man raced by him through Forty-third street. Sam Schepps was in the running board and in the car he saw Rosenthal.Shapiro, two other men were in the car, said the witness, but they were not any of the gunmen now in Sing Sing. He said he told Policeman Jack Kelly what he knew during the week
Becker was convicted.FEARED FOR LIFE.
Dresner insisted that he had kept still because he had been in fear of his life. He had lost that fear now, he added.District Attorney Whitman tried to get the witnesses to tell who he was afraid would kill him. Dresner said there were "plenty of people" in New York to be afraid of. He was unable, however, to give any names.
"I was taking no chances with New York gunmen and stray bolshies," he explained.Why did you not come to me and tell me the story?" asked the District Attorney.The witness laughed loudly.
"Why?" he said. "If I had gone to you and told that, I'd never even have a chance to get out of the criminal courts without being shot. I

GUNMEN MUST BE EXECUTED

Four Convicted of Rosenthal Murder Denied New Trial.

that when he heard Rose say to Vallon and Webber, "Go put it over on him." The witness said he "did not want to get into any trouble."

When Whitman concluded, Wahle, attorney for the gunmen, questioned the witness about his fear of Rose, Webber and Vallon. Dresner repeated that he had been "afraid that these men or their friends would have got me if I had told a story involving them."

The next witness was William K. Burwell, a professional billiard player of Waterbury, Connecticut.

Like Dresner, Burwell stuck to the fact that he had seen Rosenthal shot down. The witness was shown pictures of the four gunmen and he swore that the man he saw fire at Rosenthal was not among the four.

KNEW POLICEMEN.

Before beginning his cross-examination, District Attorney Whitman instructed five men in the courtroom to stand up.

"Do you know these men?" he asked.

"I do," said Burwell. "They are Connecticut policemen. I have known them all six years or more."

Whitman then plunged into the witness' police record. Burwell admitted that he had been arrested many times and that in sporting circles he was known as the "St. Louis Kid."

Questioned by counsel for the defense, the witness said he realized he would be asked about his police record, but that he knew he had important evidence and that it was his duty to come forward and present it.

ASKED DESCRIPTION.

Justice Goff asked Burwell for a minute description of the man he saw shoot at Rosenthal. Burwell said the man was about five feet, eight inches tall, of medium build, had a dark, soft hat on and was "sharp-faced."

The witness did not know whether the man had a high, sharp nose, such as Harry Vallon has.

Samuel Kalmanson, formerly clerk in an East Side store, was next called. He testified that he and a friend were walking through Forty-third street, near the scene of the murder, when they heard shooting. A man with a smoking revolver brandished two guns, he said. Here the witness was shown a photograph of Harry Vallon and he identified it as the man who had held the revolver. Whitman's cross-examination failed to shake him.

TESTIMONY WORTHLESS.

Justice Goff in his opinion held that the testimony of the witnesses, Dresner, Burwell, Rec and Kalmanson was worthless, and of 15 affidavits submitted by counsel for the defense, declared that only four of those submitted by the witnesses named—were even worthy of consideration.

"On the law and the facts, the defendants have had a fair trial and a jury of their fellow citizens has pronounced them guilty," said Justice Goff. "The court of last resort has unanimously affirmed that conviction. Appeal has been made for executive clemency and in these moments, a year and five months after the conviction, when the crime in itself is almost forgotten and human sympathies are deeply touched at the prospect of four human beings paying the highest penalty known to the law, strenuous efforts are made to arrest the judgment of the law."

"Were those efforts directed alone to human sympathy there would be but one answer. But they are not directed to human sympathy. They are directed to an instrument of law, whose sole duty is to administer justice, and no matter how harsh it may seem to be, it is nevertheless justice to deny the motion."

ELEVENTH-HOUR EVIDENCE.

Justice Goff laid great stress upon the fact that each of the witnesses introduced by the defense today had waited until the last minute to make known their testimony.

"The impression produced upon my mind," he said, "was most persuasive of disbelief in what they said."

Discussing the testimony of Dresner, the justice said: "The only reason he assigned for his failure to appear in the trial before is that he was in fear of his life, of whom he was afraid, he does not state, and his failure where human life is involved to come forward as a witness until the last hour, when opportunity for examination or contradiction is not as strong as reliance can be placed upon his testimony."

Goff expressed the opinion that Dresner's testimony indicated it was made to fit that of Jack Rose in the trial proper and he quoted from Rose's testimony in indicating similar points.

Of Burwell, the justice said the point on which his testimony rested was his statement that none of the four defendants, pictures of whom he had seen, was the man he declared he saw shoot Gambler Rosenthal.

NEVER SAW DEFENDANTS.

"Burwell never saw either one of the defendants and the only knowledge he has of them was derived from his seeing some pictures purporting to represent the defendants, a clipping from a newspaper," said Goff.

"It is unnecessary to dwell for a moment on the utter insincerity of such testimony as tending to anything like accurate identification. The mere negative statement that a man who fired the shot was not one of four persons whose faces are outlined in a newspaper, without any evidence that such outlines are true and correct representatives of the defendants and in the face of positive testimony that the defendant fired the shot is worthless."

The jury then read the verdict.

New York gunmen, who are to die in the chair at dawn Monday, were told tonight by Warden Clancy that their last hope of life had fled when Justice Goff, in New York, denied a motion that they be given a new trial.

"Well, boys," said the warden, as he entered the death house, where the four tensely waited, "it's bad news." And then in a few words he told the four men that their last chance had failed.

The quartet took the news quietly. They apparently had felt little hope, for news at the prison earlier in the evening was that two new witnesses in New York had made anything but a good impression and none of them said anything, save thanking the warden for his interest. Only a few words were spoken and the prison official, plainly grieved, left the death house.

Herrowitz, Rosenberg and Seldens tonight observed the Feast of the Passover with great religious fervor. The three, with "Dago Frank" Crofted, the fourth victim of the chair, were prepared for death today. All were shaven, shorn, bathed and from their cells were taken all their belongings.

PREPARED FOR DEATH.

Not a thing was left in the cells of the doomed men which they have had before. Even the bed clothing was changed. Each was given a cheap, black suit, a soft shirt, cotton underwear and coarse leather shoes, crumpled now. Even a bible given the men some weeks ago was taken and when they heard their fate the four were locked in their cells with only the watchful eyes of the guards to watch their last moments.

Trade union leaders, however, were told last day on earth. Final preparations for the last scene in the lives of the four men were made. The four were locked in their cells with only the watchful eyes of the guards to watch their last moments.

will be slit to the knees. Then they will be left to await the fatal dawn. Rosenberg, who has issued frequent statements, sent out another tonight. It read:

"Gentlemen of the Press: An editorial in today's Sun speaks of 'swaggered' and 'crushed' as often." It also speaks of "sudden end" and of "old bravado." As our keepers may prove, there is no "old bravado" here. There is a pity, sudden as your editorial says, but it is here, thank God, and our spiritual advisers.

"Gentlemen of the press, 'Thou shalt not bear false witness.'"

"Respectfully,"

RABBI ASKS PASSOVER DELAY.

OSKINING, N. Y., April 11.—Warden Clancy of Sing Sing Prison received today a message from Rabbi Goldstein, Jewish chaplain of the New York Tombs, asking him to use his authority to postpone the execution of the four gunmen until Thursday, but not later, as Friday and Saturday were the most holy days in the Passover. The warden failing to do so, he asked that the request be communicated to Superintendent of Prisons John R. Riley. Riley, who was in the prison at the time, declined to honor the Rabbi's request.

The doomed gunmen, when they were visited by Judson H. Lee, the Episcopal rector, and Prison Chaplain Caslin, displayed little trace of high spirits of last night.

"These men have now had their hopes raised and crushed so often," said Dr. Lee, "that the clammy and power of response is gone. Nothing less than an order for their reprieve can save them now."

State into which they have been taken.

are prone to emphasize the decadence of the male species have discovered a handy argument in the comparative stature of the kings and queens of Europe. Nearly all the monarchs are shorter than their wives. George of England is several inches less than Queen Mary in height. The German Emperor is so much taller than her husband that the Kaiser usually has her sit down when they are photographed together. The Czarina makes her husband look like Mr. Pip when she stands besides him, Queen Ena of Spain is nearly a head taller than Alfonso, and King Victor of Italy barely reaches the shoulder of Queen Helene.

RETURNS FROM EAST.

ALAMEDA, April 11.—George W. Neils has returned from the East, where he toured extensively and will again take an active interest in baseball in this section. It is said that Neils may become manager of the Fruitvale S. J. S. team, but there is nothing definite yet.

It's Easy to Peel Off All Your Freckles

The contrast between the freckles and the clear skin appears to be more than partially successful in whitening the skin. Freckles, ordinary freckles, are far better, it is really people of the freckles. Get an ounce of it at the nearest drugstore and tonight spread on enough to completely cover your face; remove in the morning with warm water. Repeat daily until every freckle has disappeared.

Rough, blotchy, pimply skin, also common at this season, may be entirely gotten rid of by this same method, without discomfort or inconvenience. The effort is decidedly worth while, the new complexion obtained being so clear, smooth and

NOTICE

The attention of theater-goers in Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley is respectfully called to the fact that one of the most remarkable events of the theatrical season is to occur today at the Oakland Orpheum.

Miss Olga Nethersole, the greatest emotional actress, she of international fame, will be seen for the first time in vaudeville at the Oakland Orpheum today, presenting the third act of "Sapho."

The wonderful art of Miss Nethersole has for years charmed the most fastidious play-goers of England and America.

There is no greater emotional actress than Miss Nethersole.

At the height of her powers, she has accepted an engagement in vaudeville under the direction of the Orpheum theaters.

Her progress from Orpheum to Orpheum has been nothing less than a triumphal tour.

Miss Nethersole's engagement in Oakland will, of course, be so noteworthy that thousands of play-goers, in addition to the hosts of regular Orpheum patrons, will desire a glimpse of the actress and the pleasure of seeing her production of "Sapho."

The management respectfully suggests that seats during the Nethersole week at the Orpheum be ordered well in advance.

They should be ordered now, by telephone, in order to avoid inevitable disappointment.

There will be an enormous crush at the end of the week when seats will be very difficult to procure.

Reservations made now, by telephone, will be held until the night of the performance that is chosen by patrons.

The Orpheum telephone is Oakland 711.

Will Essay Difficult Roles St. Mary Pupils in New Plays

Young Thespians Will Again Strive for Stage Laurels

The A. P. G. U. Literary Society of St. Mary's College will venture upon its third annual entertainment on April 11. Two dramatic sketches will be given. One is "The Verdict," from the versatile pen of Louis Felan Le Fevre, '13, the editor of the college journal, the "Collegian." The young author has already broken into the dramatic field with the sketches, "His Mother," and "The Governor's Clerk," both of which have been well received in the bay cities. The leading roles of this playlet will be assumed by Emmett McNamara and Howard Macree, both capable and well known to the dramatic followers of St. Mary's College. They will be supported by a strong cast consisting of...

The second playlet was written by Will Scarlet, and this is enough to affirm the excellent quality of this sketch. It is entitled "The Bride of Birth" and the embodied theme chronicles some adventures of the master rogue and poet, Francois Villon. This difficult role will be handled by Fred West, while the part of Regnier De Montigny will be taken by Thomas Lennon. The remainder of the cast consists of...

O'Connor, Francis Ashe, Edward Wall, J. W. Montgomery, Theodore Day, Andrew Peterson, Sam A. Wall, Robert Harding and Harry Koster.

To add vocal and variety to the program vocal solos and oratorical features have been arranged. Those who will shine in this respect are Fred Kerrick, Richard Hammond, Theodore Davis and Joe O'Connor. Harry Koster is a newly elected member of the A. P. G. U. and will play a prominent part in the coming show.

PAY $200 SHEEP RENT TO STUDY TICK HABITS

WASHINGTON, April 11.—A new line of attack upon the tick of the Rocky Mountain regions which is charged with causing the dreaded spotted or Rocky Mountain fever, was arranged yesterday by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Newton in charge of the public health service.

Mr. Newton authorized Surgeon L. D. Frick, stationed at Victor, Montana, to hire 1000 sheep for three months to study the habits of the tick, which is supposed to find peace and quiet in sheep wool.

The Government will pay $200 rent for the sheep.

WILL RECOVER STOLEN RUGS

$26,400 Persian Treasures
Soon to Be in Owner's Hands.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 11.—Benjamin Kalsely, owner of fine Persian rugs valued at $26,400, stolen by burglars from his apartments at 120 Pierce street, is resting easily tonight, safe in the knowledge that his treasures will be restored to him. The fact that he has almost regained them and that they are in the hands of the police as evidence against three accused persons in custody, is due to the ignorance of those responsible for breaking into his room at an early hour this morning.

Two women and a man were concerned in the theft of the rugs, one of which is valued at $25,000 alone and is said to be 400 years old. The trio are registered at the city prison as follows: Anna Svenson, housewife; Grace Thares, housewife; Oscar Carl West, sailor.

Mrs. Svenson has admitted that the plan of the robbery was her's and that together with West, who has been living in her apartment, and Mrs. Thares, who occupied rooms adjoining, she made her way into the lodgings of Kalsely in the dead of night and gathered up the rugs. Neither she nor her companions knew the value of the treasures when with the aid of a pass key they opened the rear door of Kalsely's apartment and robbed him. The rugs were removed in suitcases at 11 o'clock this morning and Mrs. Svenson accompanied West to a pawnshop at 162 Columbus avenue, where an effort was made to dispose of them at $10 apiece.

The proprietor became suspicious and asked for the bill of sale. West left, returned with a forged receipt, and walked into the arms of the waiting police. In the meantime other clues were being run down and tonight Detective Murphy, Driscoll and Kracke arrested the women. They promptly confessed their guilt and were placed in detainee. The police say they will charge them with burglary tomorrow.

BRAKEMAN CHARGED WITH RIDER'S DEATH

SEATTLE, April 11.—As a result of the death in the city hospital here yesterday of Lawrence Kelly, 26, three brakemen employed by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad were arrested at Cle Elum last night and ordered held for investigation. Kelly, who was beating his way on a freight train, was run over yesterday at Maple Valley, 20 miles east of here. Men who were with him asserted that he was thrown off the train by a brakeman and fell between the cars. C. D. Ward, H. B. Brines and J. H. Watson, the brakemen held at Cle Elum, said they knew nothing of the accident to Kelly until they reached the next station beyond Maple Valley when the operator told them a man had been run over.

ROB TRUNK TO FIND PLANS FOR AEROPLANE

SAN FRANCISCO, April 11.—A bold attempt was made this afternoon to steal the plans and patents for an aeroplane invented by Henry J. List of 402 Hampshire street. A burglar broke into List's room and pried open a trunk containing a watch stolen and an effort was made to force a second trunk, containing the plans. The thief is believed to have been scared away before finishing his work.

SYSTEM

SYSTEM'S great! Among other things, it's the lubricant of Commerce—the oil that keeps the wheels of business running smooth.

We've systematically dropped a lot of that oil onto the wheels of our Business during recent months.

We figured out that what you men wanted was not to pay less for your Suits and Overcoats, but to get MORE for your money.

YOU WANTED greater values—more "snap," more "go!"—better cloths—faultless tailoring—and, above all, not only a perfect fit, but an absolutely COMFORTABLE FIT.

So we started to systematically cram in VALUE—to give you MORE for your money—especially in the famous Hart Schaffner & Marx Suits. And we harnessed up our THREE STORES, ("Roos-Heeseman's" in Oakland and Berkeley, ROOS BROS. in San Francisco) into a THREE-STORE BUYING POWER—That gave us the greatest purchasing SYSTEM devoted solely to Men's and Young Men's Suits and Overcoats west of Chicago.

But we didn't stop there—we added "PRICE POLICY" to our system.

—We figured out that if we sold four THIRTY DOLLAR Suits or Overcoats for TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS apiece where we'd only been selling one before we'd give you Men and Young Men a great deal MORE for your money and the volume would recompense us for our shortened profits.

And we've honestly and systematically done that—and that's the whole reason why our business in Men's Suits and Overcoats has gone ahead systematically during recent months.

MAY ATTEND NATIONAL PLANNING CONFERENCE

The Chamber of Commerce received an invitation from the executive committee of the National Conference on City Planning to send a representative to the National Conference to be held at Toronto, May 25th to 27th.

The meeting promises to be one of particular interest owing to the active support of the powerful commission of conservation which is sending its representatives throughout the Dominion of Canada to secure the attendance of the people in the cities in public life and out of public life whose views have the greatest value.

It is expected that reports will be received from more than fifty cities in the United States in which city planning is being put into operation. Among the prominent participants in the proceedings will be Frederick L. Olmsted, chairman executive committee, one of the greatest American authorities on city planning; Andrew Wright, Crawford of the Public Ledger, Philadelphia; J. V. Davies, consulting engineer, Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company; R. S. Courlay of the University of Toronto; and V. Hubbard, professor of landscape architecture, Harvard University.

DISCUSS STATEMENT OF RESERVE BANK COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Members of Congress and others who have criticized the federal reserve bank organization's committee selection of bank cities and its definition of reserve districts were discussing today the statement of the committee in defense of its position. They plan to analyze the statement before making any further efforts to have the committee reconsider its selections.

Considerable opposition has developed in Congress and from representatives in cities which sought reserve banks but were unsuccessful in their efforts to get them. The committee's statement was issued in reply to these criticisms. Members of the committee hoped today that their answer would convince critics that they acted in the best interests of the country in their selection of the bank reserve cities.

People of every school of thought, politics or religion are invited to participate in the discussion.

PEOPLE'S PHILHARMONIC PLANNING TEN CONCERTS

The People's Philharmonic Association is planning a series of ten symphony concerts, and in order to support the sixty-piece orchestra, is conducting a novel campaign. In order that the people of smaller means may avail themselves of the concerts, tickets will be disposed of in large blocks to unions, corporations and firms. This will permit of a greatly reduced charge, placing the concerts within the reach of all classes. And at the same time insuring the support of the musicians.

The conductor of the Philharmonic Association is Herman Perlet, who is widely known for his ability in directing musical organizations, and also for his compositions. The people of the entire bay region are supporting the movement, and its success is practically assured.

ALFALFA: NOT CLOVER.
FRESNO, April 11.—Recently Patrolman Gene Foran, the tall man of the police force, purchased two sacks of seed from a local produce store. One sack contained clover and the other alfalfa. Foran planted what he thought was the clover in his front yard and the alfalfa in the back yard. Alfalfa is now sprouting home and his chickens are pecking the clover in the back yard. As the first cut of alfalfa promises to be a large one, Patrolman Foran is considering for the hay for his children.

left her anchorage yesterday afternoon and tied up at the Tampico wharf. She was loaded with marines ready for landing. Preparations for sending the men ashore were going forward rapidly. There was an interval of waiting and the launch steamed up at full speed and a sealed envelope was delivered to the officer in command. The launch had come from Florida, outside the harbor, and on receipt of the message the Prairie cast away and returned to her anchorage.

What message was delivered to the Prairie is not known, but the marines were ready to go ashore when the launch reached the transport.

General Huerta has demanded full information as to the situation here. Tonight the military governor dispatched several lengthy telegrams to the capital, reporting the incident.

DESPERATE BATTLE RAGES.
EL PASO, Tex., April 11.—Aside from brief dispatches that desperate fighting was being fought between Torreon and Saltillo no word had come from the headquarters of General Francisco Villa at Torreon tonight.

The lack of news was regarded by Constitutionalists in Juarez as ominous and the belief was general that the engagement progressing at Parras and other points near San Pedro, Coahuila, was taking the entire strength of Villa's seasoned army.

Two separate battles were in progress when the last meager reports were received. The most important was that at Parras, ninety-eight miles east of Torreon and 100 miles west of Saltillo, where General Refugio Velasco's main body of federals was being attacked by the combined Constitutional forces of General Francisco Co. General Luis Herrera and General Eugenio Aguirre Benavides.

The latter brigade—the Zaragoza brigade—bore the brunt of the early fighting before Torreon and lost nearly 40 per cent of its strength.

Nearer to San Pedro another federal column was engaged by the troops of General Toribio Ortega and General Hernandez. The identity of this column has not been established.

VETERAN DOCTOR DIES SUDDENLY AND ALONE

SAN FRANCISCO, April 11.—Dr. John F. Welch, whose white beard and flowing locks have made him for many years a conspicuous figure on the streets of the city, was found dead in a room at the Oakland hotel, 44 Fifth street, early tonight. He lived the room at 1 o'clock this morning and when he did not appear today Frank Stacey, the proprietor, became suspicious, climbed through the transom and found his guest dead. Death is supposed to have been due to heart failure, and the coroner is searching for friends or relatives of the deceased.

RECTOR TO APPEAR HERE PROCLAIMED DANCE KING

THOMAS A. RECTOR, FAMOUS DANCER, WHO WILL BE SEEN AT YE LIBERTY THEATER.

In conjunction with a production of Henry Miller's delightful play of last season, "The Rainbow," Manager Bishop of Ye Liberty will next week offer his patrons an added attraction in Thomas Allen Rector, famed as one of the foremost exponents of modern dances that the contagious "dance craze" has developed in New York City.

Rector comes to Oakland direct from New York City, where he is an acknowledged social favorite. He has been a feature of the smartest dances of the gay metropolis, notably Miss Georgia Owens' and the Hotel Plaza dances, and had the distinction of opening the remarkable Pylon dancing carnival at the Metropolitan opera house last December.

He was the big feature at Los Angeles' tango festival last month and the newspapers of that city, after comparing his dancing to that of the well-known dancers that had appeared there just previously, proclaimed Rector "the dance king."

Assisted by Miss Dorothy Smoller, who has been his dancing partner for more than a year, Rector will next week at Ye Liberty show a number of the latest ballroom dances, several of which have never before been seen in this city. Probably the most novel and entertaining of his dances will be "The Lame Duck Waltz," which was originated at Newport last summer. Another interesting dance will be the "Viennese Waltz," and then he will show the fashionable one-step, the "Maxine Brazilian," the "Tango Argentine" and the "Rector Waltz," a creation of his own, which has won him fame throughout the East. Each of these dances Rector will show in their most proper and correct form.

Rector's appearance at Ye Liberty next week will not only be a pleasing diversion, but a very instructive entertainment to those who are at all interested in the new ballroom dances, for he is an acknowledged authority on the correctness of them.

Rector's only other appearance on this side of the bay will be at the Hotel Oakland dance next Wednesday evening, the last and what promises to be the most brilliant dance of the season.

AUTO CRASHES INTO CANDY STORE WINDOW

SAN FRANCISCO, April 11.—An automobile left to its own devices and without the restraint of either clutch or brake, went on a quiet tour of the city tonight, which entered in a riot when it crashed through the plate glass window of George Heas candy store, 1014 Sutter street. The machine smashed its way in amongst a bevy of pretty candy girls who were serving nearly forty customers with Easter bonbons. The impression immediately prevailed that there had been a disaster, and there was a simultaneous rush to the street of all those present. The car is the property of Johnson & Richman, auto repairers, 111½ Post street. Richman stopped the auto in front of the Wells Fargo branch at 1250 Bush street, and small boys are supposed to have released the brake. Harry Lee, a chauffeur and Patrolman Feeney made unsuccessful attempts to stop the car in its mad flight.

IDENTIFIES BODY AS HIS SISTER'S

And H. E. Baxter of Oakland, Ohio, brother of Mrs. Myrtle Allison, of Wilkesburg, gave one look at the matted hair, the two crowned teeth and the clean upper jaw, and almost collapsed into the arms of detectives in the party as he murmured: "That is my sister Myrtle."

The district attorney promised at noon today to show before nightfall all the body of Mrs. Allison. And while he would not say tonight that he had, he was generally credited with having done so. Baxter was most positive of his identification, and Attorney Fred Scott supported him, pointing out that Baxter would gladly cling to the slightest hope that his sister still lived.

More expressive, however, that a statement that his optimism stood vindicated by the find, was a declaration by Jackson shortly after the party return from the cemetery that he "was now ready to turn to other cases in connection with Meredith" and that a number of additional arrests might be looked for at any time.

"LOST" CHILD REGAINED; FATHER LOCATES BABE

SAN FRANCISCO, April 11.—A 11-month-old babe, left in a diminutive go-cart just outside the door of the home of L. M. Lawrence, 415 Clayton street, caused a commotion in the neighborhood tonight. The youngster, a plump, rosy-cheeked baby, was seen after two hours of purling and cooing in the Lawrence household, when the father, with tears in his eyes, his face wet with perspiration and bearing all the marks of a desperate man, rushed up, snatched it away and disappeared.

Mrs. Lawrence had taken in the babe only after she was convinced that it had been deserted. The officer from Park station had already gathered up the little one in his arms when the father appeared.

He did not give his name, but his one short ejaculation was sufficient clue to his desperate state of mind. "If I hadn't found this child I would never have known it was mine," he said.

SURE OF Y. M. C. A. CARNIVAL SUCCESS

Members of Physical Department of Oakland Branch Look for Great Time.

The members of the Physical Department of the Oakland Y. M. C. A. are anticipating a grand success this year at their fourth annual Y. M. C. A. carnival. They have produced a very attractive program advertising this special feature of the year. A number of the youths products of the association have their photos on the front page, demonstrating a superbly built youth in the person of Vincent Smith, who has been chosen through the runner, intermediate and high school grades of members to unit now no longer a mere "extraordinary" well-built young man, the result of systematic training and exercise in the department.

Walter Ray is the possessor also of a delightful physique. He has acquired it largely in the enjoyment of aquatic sports. This boy is a wonderful athlete. He is a member of the Y. M. C. A. and can swim 15 yards in 10 seconds. He can also do the coast in swimming. The association looks forward to his showing some great success for the future.

OF SHOOTING FLING ACT.
The shooting fling act by James McLaughlin, a loyal member of the association, who has been very successful in winning major prizes in the shooting fling act of the previous year, is scheduled Monday, April 15, at 8:00 p. m.

ed in baseball costume, where he has shown his prowess as a pitcher, having represented the association in all outdoor baseball. He is an all-around athlete and can play skillfully an important part in many of the acts.

The lighter vein will be represented in the person of John White, a mimic and comedian of no small ability. Having the additional ability of being an acrobat and athlete, he can add material to his act. He will keep the audience in roars of laughter.

Doyle Campbell will play the role of a sailor lad, with winsome smiles, sailor's romps and typical dances. He can win his way into favor with his audience.

EARNED BASKETBALL HONORS.
Ernest Myers is shown as a basketball player. On the representative teams he has earned the distinction to be placed on the cover page of the program. As a member of the intermediate, he has always demonstrated his enthusiasm in class work and games and has never been found wanting when it came to boosting any line of activity.

Clert Graham, with life in every movement, will demonstrate the part of a cripple. When he will illustrate first aid to the injured. This practical demonstration will be profitable to the audience as well as entertaining.

Words cannot express sufficient praise for the ability of the boys and their instructors in producing this attractive program, and if the crowd in proportion to previous years' record the gymnasium will be over crowded both nights.

DEGREE OF POCAHONTAS TO HOLD INITIATION
Mohawk Council No. 74, Degree of Pocahontas, will adopt a large class of candidates at the next regular meeting of the lodge to be held Wednesday evening, April 18, when the initiation will be held.

"SEVEN AGES OF PERU" SUNDAY MUSEUM THEME

SAN FRANCISCO April 11.—The weekly exhibit and 3 o'clock Sunday lecture at the Affiliated Colleges museum are both entitled "The Seven Ages of Peru." The lecture is the first of a series of two by Assistant Curator E. W. Gifford dealing with the museum's collection of Peruvian antiquities. It was through a university expedition (headed by Mr. Phoebe A. Hearst) that the finest collection of Peruvian antiquities in America was acquired, and is now on great part permanently on view at the museum. Scientifically, this expedition was of the highest importance through establishing that the famous Incas found by the Spaniards were only a species of primitive representatives of the last of seven nations, or civilizations that successively occupied Peru before the discovery of America.

The earliest of these people lived before 1200 B. C., being unknown and unknown contemporaries of Moses and Hammurabi, or even their predecessors. A second civilization, of high degree, was flourishing in the coast districts of Peru when the Greeks, besieged Troy and Solomon built the temple in Jerusalem. In this way six peoples followed each other before the Incas came on the scene of history.

The museum's entire Peruvian collection is so large that this changing growth of the ancient nation is almost lost sight of in the bewildering array of thousands of specimens. In line with the museum's policy of making the collection available to the public, a selection of specimens is being made which epitomizes the entire development of the civilization of Peru in a single case, which can be studied and its lesson carried away by the visitor in three minutes. Opening on Sunday, the exhibit will be on view the last time the following Saturday, to give way then to a new display.

1915 Tourists'
Reservations Are Being Made in S. F.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 9.—The leading political event in the State just now is the appearance of Congressman Knowland in Los Angeles and actively launch his contest for the United States senatorship.

Knowing Joe Knowland as they do, his frankness on all occasions to the electorate whose support he seeks, his able and brilliant record for the interests of all sections of California as a national legislator and his enthusiasm born of conviction and maintained by a strong physical and mental vitality, his many friends both north and south of Tehachapi are confident of some keynote utterances of the campaign from him. He will be greatly welcomed in the southern region for he has effectively performed things for it in the lower house with the same zeal and intelligence as he has displayed for the San Francisco bay region and for the many important matters that are of vital interest to the great San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys.

"He has done things; he has amply shown Californians that he knows how to accomplish things"—these were the remarks of a shrewd political student of San Francisco last night in expressing the opinion that in Los Angeles and San Diego as well as in every other locality of California the people will rise to the occasion and honor Knowland as a faithful public servant.

This man pointed out how fortunate it is for Knowland that his clean and intelligent record in the House clearly, unanswerably shows his fitness for the toga. All the other candidates of all the other parties are lacking in this one, great, leading requisite. As a climax to his other qualifications, this student made allusion to Knowland's work on the great issue of the hour, one so closely affecting the development of the State, the fight for free canal tolls for American coastwise shipping.

$4 a Day for Vanderbilt Dog's Fare

Mrs. Willie K. Vanderbilt Jr., who came west from the Florida resorts several weeks ago with her children and several servants, had a couple of pet dogs along. All but Mrs. Vanderbilt spent their time at the Hotel Del Monte, she coming up to the city on several occasions to visit old friends and to confer with her local agents and attorneys about certain business interests. Floating up from Del Monte has come a tale about the canine part of her entourage and the way its care and comfort were looked after. The dogs had to be served a la carte for their three daily meals, the table d'hôte not being considered just the thing for them by their devoted and rich mistress. They had the latter service at a Florida hotel and Mrs. Vanderbilt was of the opinion that they had not thrived on it. Del Monte is said to have charged her four dollars a day for an a la carte service for the pampered poodles, but she did not mind the expense, especially when they showed a decided change for the better after being there the first week. It is a common thing for the rich to have their dogs served table d'hôte at the Del Monte and the big caravansaries in San Francisco and elsewhere. But the a la carte for the four-footed animals is a decided rarity. According to the story given me, this was the fourth or fifth instance of the kind at Del Monte. I believe the first instance of the sort down there is credited to the Duke and Duchess of Manchester. The duchess' father is Eugene Zimmerman of Cincinnati. The trio were at the hotel about 1895, having a quiet confab about the duke's financial affairs. It was on that occasion that the duchess' three pet dogs were given the best the house had a la carte and with a laugh she overcame her father's remonstrance at this bit of extravagance when he paid the bill for all six. The Fairmont still remembers Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Thomas and their pet chow dog, Tao. Mrs. Thomas is the divorced wife of Frank Gould, who is now married to an English actress. The Thomas couple were en route home from Japan a couple of years ago when they stopped at the Fairmont and paid for a room and special meals for the far from pretty but much fondled Tao. His bill did not faze them in the least.

Voted in Winemakers' Interest

The success of Underwood, the leader of the Democratic majority in the House, for the senatorship in Alabama over his spirited and combative opponent, Congressman Hobson, is of more than passing interest in California. Underwood voted in favor of the California wine-makers against the Pomerene tax. A committee of prominent Californians, including M. F. Tarpey and Theodore A. Bell, were in the national capital helping to conduct the fight. The contest was in the interest of new wines as against the doctored product of some of the eastern states. Hobson made the matter an issue before the Alabama primaries, charging that Underwood was in favor of the liquor interests because he voted against a proposed big tax on brandy. Underwood met the charge fully, promptly and squarely. He gets the long term, commencing in March, 1915. The term of Senator Johnston, who died, expires then. For this short, unexpired term another refused to seat him by 32 to 31, apparently on the ground that under the seventeenth, or direct elections, amendment a Governor cannot appoint a Senator any more. After the wine tax fight in Washington, Tarpey was banqueting at the Palace by the Home Industry League. This was said to have been part of a movement by Hearst to groom Tarpey for the senatorship in 1916. Now that President Wilson has sprung his contest to repeal free tolls for American coastwise shipping, Tarpey is said not to hanker after any political honors these days because of the unpromising prospects.

U. S. Goods in Floating Exhibit

Joseph J. Keegan and Hilliard Rosencrantz, familiarly known to their friends in this city also to the merchants in China, Japan and Australasia as "the Irishman and the Jew," have finally succeeded in their ambitious trade scheme to introduce American-made goods into the West Indies and in Central and South America. With ample financial backing from big firms in the United States, the two men have chartered a big German steamer, fitted it with American goods properly arranged as a large floating exhibit and will take along to help introduce and sell the articles some 350 drummers or representatives of the houses interested in the project. The ship is to stop at many ports on its extended and noteworthy tour. Keegan and Rosencrantz have during the past seven or eight years sold a large quantity of English and American goods in all parts of the Orient and in Australasia. They have made a great deal of money in these ventures and were frequently guests at the Palace on their trips to and from the Orient. Their success in placing American goods in those foreign countries attracted the attention of and favorable mention by Taft when he was President in 1913 and his Secretary of State, Philander C. Knox. Keegan was born in Ireland but lived in San Francisco for several years. Rosencrantz was born here, and it was in this city that both young men learned to speak Chinese and Japanese fluently. It was this linguistic ability that first led them to sell goods in the Orient. Rosencrantz has a number of relatives living here. One of his brothers is a practicing physician. At present he holds a responsible position under the Board of Health. Another brother is connected as a writer for a Chinese daily newspaper and prior to 1903 conducted many visitors through Chinatown as a Palace Hotel guide.

Weyerhaeuser Owned Timber Here

Frederick W. Weyerhaeuser, who passed away last Saturday at his winter home near Pasadena, was the wealthiest man who ever died in California. Weyerhaeuser was generally recognized as the richest lumber owner not only in the United States but in the world. Some bankers for a number of years have considered him more of a multi-millionaire than either John D. Rockefeller or Carnegie. St. Paul was long his home city, and I notice that the press obituary notices sent out from there placed his fortune easily at 300 millions. Several years ago when the Washington authorities were investigating the so-called Weyerhaeuser lumber trust it was said the trust owned 380 million dollars of timber, controlled 20 million dollars of Indian timber and was seeking to "grab" 300 million dollars more of Indian timber. When the late E. H. Harriman got control of the Southern Pacific about twelve years ago he found the company's subsidiary, the Oregon and California Railroad, owned in Southern Oregon about three million acres of valuable timber land estimated to be worth all the way from fifty to seventy-five millions. Weyerhaeuser wanted to buy the acreage, offering Harriman, it is said, a very large sum. His offer was declined. About two years ago the Federal Court at Portland decided for several reasons that the land was forfeited to the government. In a desperate fight to retain the valuable property, the Southern Pacific has just completed a formidable record of 9000 pages on an appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. T. B. Walker, another lumber king of St. Paul, had Weyerhaeuser as a partner when he bought in Lassen and four other northern counties in California about a million acres of timber. That is the only timber interest Weyerhaeuser has ever had in this State. His holdings of timber in Canada and Mexico are considered very large, a fact which made some bankers think he was wealthier than the famous oil king. At an interview at the Palace hotel some years ago I recall that the lumber king told me he came to the United States in 1852 and soon became interested at Rock Island, Ill. in a small way in a humble sawmill along with his brother-in-law, F. C. A. Denckman. Not long afterwards he explored the timber lands of Wisconsin and there first saw his future and the beginning of his fortune. At the time I spoke with him he considered himself the delightful combination of a man with a vast fortune derived from vast common sense.

Capt. Collins Redivivus

The other day a New York dispatch set forth that Captain James Glenn Collins, the divorced husband of Natalie Schenck, whose beauty was the sensation of a Newport season some years ago, had been indicted on a charge of having passed a worthless check on a hotel. About a year ago he was arrested in Chicago on a charge of passing a worthless $25 draft on R. H. Thompson of Baltimore. Collins is still remembered at the St. Francis, where he was a guest several years before the fire. He was then considered a dashing English army officer and supposed millionaire. Natalie Schenck and her mother arrived at the hotel a day or two after he registered and they surprised both western and eastern society by quietly going to Monterey and getting married. It was said at the time that Mrs. Schenck's objections to the wedding were brushed away by the captain's pretty speech and golden promises. The pretty Natalie wanted the Britisher for husband, but their married life was a brief and unhappy one.

They quarreled before reaching Honolulu. They returned from there on the next steamer and left immediately for the East. Collins came into much newspaper notoriety at the time because on his honeymoon trip he took along a fine Jersey cow so that he would not miss on his long ocean voyage his plentiful supply of fresh milk. The bovine cost him a pretty penny. He came back from Honolulu with a "cow" and the notoriety it provoked was the first cause of their quarrel. After she divorced the captain I believe, the former wife happily married a wealthy easterner, S. Osgood Pell, who met a tragic death in an automobile collision last summer.

Harrison and the Filipinos

Every now and then one reads criticisms to the detriment of the administration Governor-General Harrison is giving in the Philippines. There general tenor is after telling the Filipinos on his arrival that he intended to give them all they wanted, Harrison is living up to his promises and is creating many vacancies for them by getting rid of numerous competent Americans in all sorts of places and offices. Visiting a sick friend at one of the large hospitals in San Francisco the other afternoon, a physician introduced me to a nurse who is one of a dozen but recently returned from Manila. The doctor thinks highly of her ability. She was in his employ before she went to the Philippines and is now with him again, particularly in his difficult cases. This trained nurse who has been in the calling for fifteen years, half of which was in Manila, says she was one of forty American nurses who was thrown out of a good hospital position within the past six months. They were paid $5 a day and were welcomed by Forbes and the other governor-generals before the advent of Harrison. Under the changed condition of affairs, room is being made for young Filipino girl nurses and they are being paid $2 a day. She says there is no chance for American woman nurses there any more and they are coming back to the United States as fast as they can. The same kind of a preference for natives is being shown, she also remarks, in government clerkships and in all other lines of activity where Harrison and his Filipino advisers can influence matters of employment.

Mazine Again in Cable News

For the second or third time we have it by cable from London that Maxine Elliott, known somewhat to fame as the leading actress for awhile with Nat Goodwin and one of his several divorced wives, is to marry Anthony F. Wilding, a famous tennis player and now and then designated as a world's champion by the British sport-loving public. Maxine, who has not in years shown us her fine taste in dressing and her beautiful eyes and lips, was a great widow before she married Goodwin. So if she does marry the tennis player it will be her third matrimonial venture. American dramatic critics always played the soft pedal when it came to speaking of the fair Maxine's histrionic ability but she is credited with having made much money and to have had a good business head in investing it to fine purpose. She is said to have a pretentious home in London and many society friends worth while. I recall after King Edward's death it was cabled Miss Elliott was in the "royal inclosure" at Epsom Downs along with King George and Queen Mary. That was a fine social recognition for the American actress. Then followed another story about her by cable to the effect that she was being shown much attention by Leopold De Rothschild, brother of the famous Lord Rothschild and one of England's richest and most influential bankers. It was said his attention to the beautiful American was a source of considerable anxiety to his exclusive family. The story went on to tell of her splendid home and the portraits it contained, naming those of five crowned heads, three American Presidents and two from France. So all in all Maxine has been having a very successful social career in the British metropolis as well as on the continent. Her sister has done better on the English stage. She is Mrs. Forbes Robertson and at times the capable support of that fine actor.

Wise Knew When to "Get Out"

Charges by his late son's mother-in-law a few days ago to the effect that John H. Wise, the former Collector of the Port, was not properly accounting for the estate of Harry Wise to his children called the attention of old wheat speculators on California street to the time in the early nineties when Harry Wise, tall, boyish and slim, and Dennis Kearney of Sand Lot political memories and troubles were bulls in the wheat market and were actually ahead of the game over $100,000 each. These were the days when young Joe Leiter of Chicago and his clique aimed at a world's success in the sugar and finally met with astonishing financial disaster. Kearney quit the speculation before the Leiter crash. He quietly told some intimates at the time that he stopped when he was $60,000 to the good. Harry Wise on learning of Leiter's movements went to Chicago with about $200,000 in winnings determined to make a million or lose all. He did plunge in the Chicago wheat pit until his bank account was a goodly half million. But he could not win all the Kearney, he got out before the collapse occurred. How his Lake City trip and experience in the big wheat pit left him financially I never heard. He did quit a winner, but never got the million he went after by any means. His father is now an old man, one of the oldest in San Francisco, and is often to be seen on Market street. How he got the Wise family of Virginia to influence President Cleveland during his first term to give him the Collectorship of the Port is a bit of interesting Federal political history hereabouts. Buckley, the "Blind White Devil," as the Chinese called him, was the San Francisco Democratic boss in those years. His following got one good plum from Cleveland when he made Dr. Bryan, the druggist in the old Grand hotel, postmaster. It was at that time that John T. Carey of Sacramento, a dark horse, walked away with the appointment as United States District Attorney. Carey lives in Oakland now and is practicing law in this city. Justice Stephen J. Field is over an Oakland lawyer for the place, while the Hearst and Buckley people wanted a Napa lawyer.

Elder Coffroth a Lawyer

Several Sacramentans at the Clabby-Murray prize fight a week ago were talking about the father of "Sunshine Jim" Coffroth, the promoter of fistic events. The elder Coffroth was for years a prominent lawyer at the capital city, he being particularly recognized as a criminal lawyer and able speaker. In that capacity the criminal element gave him much of his practice. A lawyer named Spaulding was his partner. On one occasion he was held up on a stage while going from Placerville over into Nevada. The three masked robbers lined him and five other passengers up along the edge of the road at revolver points, demanding their money and valuables.

"You don't want my valuables and money," said Coffroth laughingly to one of the masked men. "I'm Coffroth, the lawyer. If you get caught you'll want me to defend you and I'll get it all back."

"All right, partner, was the reply. 'We take what you've got just the same. Then if you should be called on to defend us you'll get it back in some other shape.'"

Hotel Will Get $8 a Day

How rooms are being engaged at some of the hotels for exposition travel last year is well worth mentioning. Take the case of the Hotel Sutter at the corner of Kearny and Sutter, owned by a former city and county engineer who made money in fuel oil and invested it in that structure. An Eastern tourist agency has contracted with the hotel for fifty rooms a day commencing on March 15, 1915, and continuing until the close of the big fair. There will be a bath with each room, two people to a room. The price per room is $8 a day. The occupants are to pay $2.50 each for the room. Breakfast will cost 50 cents and dinner $1, thus making up the $8. What the visitors pay the tourist agency for making this arrangement for them I do not know. The $8 is net to the hotel. This agency contemplates a change of occupants in the rooms every week or ten days. It intends to book far ahead so there will be no mistake about who is to occupy the accommodations between any given dates. Other tourist agencies are making similar arrangements at other hotels. The Palace, Fairmont and St. Francis are not making any of these contract reservations. From all reports and indications, the eastern tourist agencies give promise of handling a very large volume of exposition travel.

Who Will Succeed Lord Strathcona?

Ever since the death of that able and interesting character, Lord Strathcona, High Commissioner for Canada in London, there has been much speculation in the local Canadian colony as to who would be his successor in the important office. Across the northern border the interest in the matter is of course more intense. The five men who have been spoken of in connection with the high position have many friends here and have visited the city at different times. Sir Richard McBride of Vancouver, premier of British Columbia, was mentioned the other day, with the positive assertion that he will get the appointment next month. However, it was said last month that either Sir William Van Horne or Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the president of the Canadian Pacific, stood an excellent chance of getting the office. All three are strong men. The two latter were formerly American railroad men. In Canada they have achieved great success. Shaughnessy succeeded Sir William Van Horne on the Canadian Pacific. It was given out last month that in case Shaughnessy was sent to London, his vice-president at Winnipeg, George J. Bury, is to become the head of the Canadian Pacific. Some of the local Canadians think Sir William Mackenzie or Sir Donald Mann, types of men like James J. Hill of St. Paul, is the more likely selection. Both have done wonders in developing the northern country with the Canadian Northern Railway, which has a steamer line to England from Montreal. Sir William has a son living here much of the year, who is a partner with him and Sir Donald Mann. Like Lord Strathcona, the five men have all climbed high on the ladder from the bottom.

Everybody Couldn't Be Pleased

As was expected all along because of its undisputed supremacy as the financial as well as commercial center of the Pacific Coast, San Francisco has been made one of the twelve regional reserve banking cities to be formed under the new currency law. It is to have 514 banks as members and will be the sixth of the twelve in point of capital stock. San Francisco's claim for this financial honor was

ASK REASON IN CANAL TOLL FIGHT

Nation-wide Interest Displayed in Grave Question Now Before Congress.

(SPECIAL TO THE TRIBUNE.)

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Not since Civil War times has there been as much interest displayed in a question before Congress as that manifested in the great Panama Canal toll fight. The forensic battle was witnessed by crowds greater than have filled the galleries of the House of Representatives for years. People came early in the morning and waited, with some of the speakers will live.

The two speeches which attracted the greatest attention were delivered by Speaker Clark and Democratic leader Underwood. Many of the sentiments uttered by these two great Democratic leaders will be quoted from thousands of platforms during the approaching campaign, particularly from Republican rostrums. The speaker, unquestionably, many Democrats were forced to vote with the "Pro Canal" side, and the members had been allowed to follow their own inclinations the repeal would have been defeated overwhelmingly.

When Speaker Clark dramatically shouted, "I would rather see that canal torn up than to give the English any control over it," cheers and applause broke forth from the House and galleries and pandemonium reigned. Great enthusiasm greeted his declaration. "We most earnestly desire peace with all nations, we want peace from none. Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute."

PRESIDENT CRITICIZED.
One of the most telling points of his speech was his statement that "The amazing requests of the President for repeal, like the peace of God, passeth all understanding."

The unwillingness of the President to divulge the real reasons for urging this mysterious surrender of American rights was commented upon by the speaker who said:

"With all due deference to the President it seems to me that we are entitled to the reasons before voting a Democratic platform, which is generally considered an indefensible one. I think, as Speaker of this House, I had a right to ask them."

The greatest demonstration of all came when in his peroration he declared:

"Now may the God of our fathers, who preserved 3,000,000 backwoods Americans from the face of the night march in the world, who guided the hand of Jefferson in writing the charter of liberty, who sustained Washington and his ragged and starving army amid the awful horrors of Valley Forge, and who gave them complete victory on the blood-stained heights of Yorktown, may He lead members to vote so as to prevent this stupendous folly—this unspeakable humiliation of the American Republic!"

CHILDERN AND APPLAUDED.
Every man in the House rose to his feet, cheering and applauding. A thousand men and women in the galleries likewise rose, many waving American flags, and then on the Democratic side a majority voted with the President and Great Britain!

Such is the power of patronage. Many of the members who voted against the repeal cast their votes to please the President and to please the British.

Underwood's speech was notable and contains many telling sentences. He said his request to pass any price American when he said:

"Not for one moment do I believe that we have violated a treaty and not for one moment do I believe that the English government seriously contends that we have violated a treaty right. Our whole difficulty in the matter arises from the un-American spirit of surrender that some of our people have exhibited toward this important question from the very beginning."

Touching the question of arbitration he declared:

"Great Britain proposed to arbitrate, but the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Sims) proposes to surrender all our rights without a fight."

In conclusion he declared:

"When will a time ever come when we can expect to gain our rights and our rights political and commercial, with the acquiescent sympathy of European governments?"

ALAMEDA, April 11. — The Misses Florence and Edythe Fulton announce the date of their wedding at a 'heart' party given at their home on Central avenue today. It will be a double ceremony and will take place at the Jonathan E. Fulton home Tuesday, June 9, when Miss Florence Fulton will become the bride of Paul Thornton Mackie and Miss

The home at 3233 Central avenue was a bower of red roses, being decorated throughout in roses and ferns, with gooseneck baskets of the same fragrant bloom ornamenting each table at the dining room which followed the cards. The date was announced on little cards enclosed in white envelopes and attached to the envelopes were the place cards and on which were the photos of the guests. The guests were seated in the dining hall on all sides and were festooned across the living room and in the reception hall.

Among the guests who were also the guests of the wedding were the Misses Ruth Collins and Grace Brickwood, cousins, who will be the two maids of honor at the coming wedding, and the Misses Eda Katz, Ruth Hutt, Ernest Chapman, Willa Bogard, Krab, and Martha Vandell, Irene Davis, and Linda Wentrich, Cante, Holmrova, Vilva Christensen, Aita Eick, Hazel Dow, Ed Curtis, Louise Bruzzen, Evelyn Faden, Irene Wart, and the Misses Marion and Anita Martin, who assisted in the church, and the Misses Alexander, (Mabel), Irene Barber, Thomas Peterson Jr. (Wanda Brabel), Claude Herberston (Addie Galt), Ward Baxter (Yara Howard) Selma Ponnau (Bertha Marchand).

Cox is with the Hawaiian Gazette and it was while on his way to the island to take up the work with the Gazette that he met Miss Pocock, who was en route to visit friends in the island. Their acquaintance ripened into something more than a friendship under the influence and soft breathers of the tropical climate.

The marriage, which will take place the Pocock home on Union street, will be a pretty wedding with but a few friends outside of the home circle, is the result of the romantic meeting. Mr. Peacock will join the colony of former Alaskans whose marriage has taken them to the Paradise of the Pacific in their new life.

CONFIDENTIAL

Memories of one's boyhood days are lovely, but one doesn't like to be awakened at midnight of them about just for the sake of them. Therefore Mayor Mott now muffles his telephone bell when he retires.

It happened a few nights ago, according to the Mayor. The telephone bell jangled, and the city's executive stirred and woke. The bell jangled again, loud and long, and after about ten minutes the Mayor thought that he couldn't possibly say into the telephone, and wondering just what kind of a strenuously-described fool was calling him, the Mayor, bumping into doors in the dark and of course bumping against the furniture, and with a ringing alarm finally reached the instrument.

"Hello!" he shouted. "What is it?"

"Is this the mayor?" asked a feminine voice.

The mayor could sleep slightly. "Yes, madam," he answered.

"Who are you, and what may I do for you?"

"Oh, nothing," answered the caller.

"I'm first one of your old loves, and I thought I'd ring you up."

The mayor slammed down the phone, negotiated the stairs three at a time, and returned to bed. The lady waited a couple of times and then the "old love" hung up, and the silence of night again reigned.

"I don't know who she was," said the mayor. "But a man must sleep."

1915 STEVENS-DURYEA CARS ARRIVE

First of the Season's Series Reach San Francisco

Without a doubt the most interesting arrivals of the week among the new models were the new Stevens-Duryea cars, the first of the 1915 series of automobiles to reach the coast from the eastern factories and also the first to be announced to the trade. The new models reached the San Francisco factory branch today in the morning and will be on display tomorrow morning for the benefit of the motor critics in this territory.

This unusually early announcement of the Stevens-Duryea series for 1915, according to Coast Manager A. W. Barber, is due to the fact that the unprecedented demand for the 1914 series cars resulted in the sale of the entire product much earlier than expected, and forced the production of the 1915 series several months in advance of the customary date for announcing their new series and Barber emphasizes this factory's recognition of the importance of the Pacific coast trade by their action in shipping the first of the 1915 series to the San Francisco market.

The new series of cars represent quality and distinction in every refined detail, and are the natural result of 21 years' experience of one of the oldest and most conservative firms in the United States, noted for building quality cars regardless of cost.

The general design and outward appearance of both the open and enclosed types now being exhibited by Barber show closely the beautiful continuous stream line characteristics of the Stevens-Duryea cars of former years, and express in every minute detail all that is luxurious and distinctive.

As formerly, only one model will be built, but will be furnished in two lengths of wheel base, 134 and 136 inches, respectively. The new car will be equipped with left hand drive and electrical starter, the design of which has been carefully worked out through various experiments which have been carried on for several years past, and proven successful by widely conducted actual road tests so that this starting device is specially adapted to the conditions found in the Stevens-Duryea motor.

A separate ignition will be provided as heretofore under the two independent systems consisting of Bosch high tension magneto and battery systems with synchronous coil, high tension timer distributor and instrument board switch. Two sets of spark plugs will be furnished.

The wiring of the lighting and starting system is enclosed in brass armored tubing to prevent leakage and deterioration of the insulation from oil fumes and heat from the engine. This will insure a minimum amount of trouble from the electric lighting and starting system, and the amount of service will be reduced to the lowest possible point.

An electric lamp is provided on the instrument board for illuminating the clock, speedometer and other instruments, and provision has also been made for turning on the main lights when this is desired.

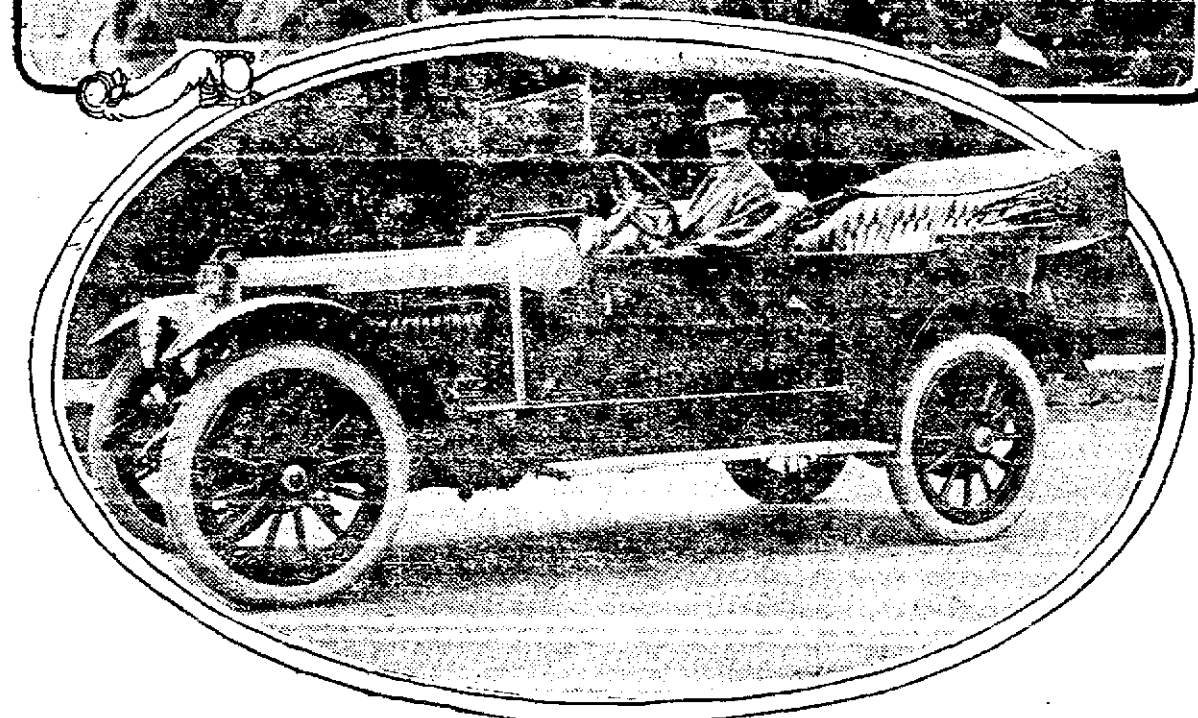

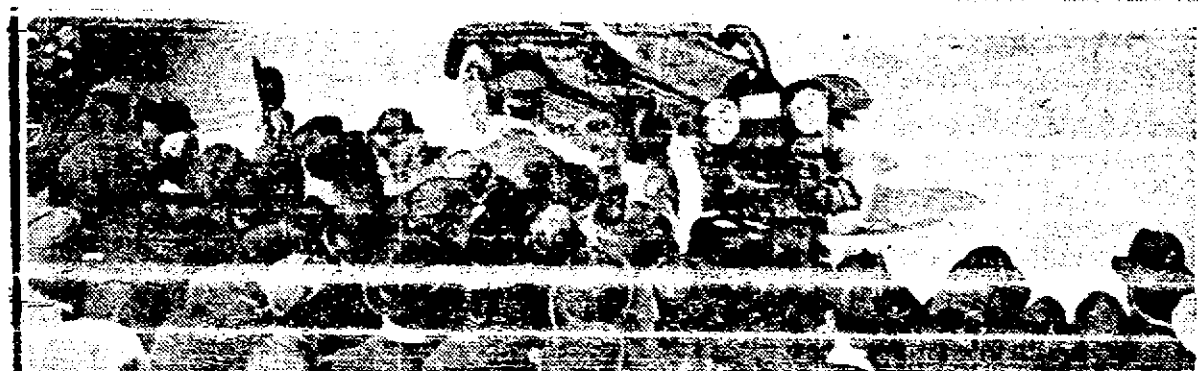

NOVEL FEATURES.

One of the most novel features of the 1915 series is the one-man top, which is supported from the rear with no bows from the side of the front seat, and is rigidly attached in front to the wind shield. It can be easily raised or lowered by one person.

The side curtains are quick attaching handled from the inside of the car, and by a very clever arrangement are entirely concealed in the lining of the top when not in use.

In the seven-passenger touring car a new style of auxiliary seat is employed, each seat having one upholstered arm on the inner side, the upholstered hand-rail providing a rest for the outside. The construction allows for folding back-ward and allowing against the side of the tonneau, and when in this position

ELECTRIC CAR MAKERS ADOPTING MOTZ TIRES

"The reports from the Six Six national automobile shows, the last of which closed recently, proves the growing popularity of cushion tires," says Oakland manager, G. A. Morrill, of the Chanslor & Lyon Company.

"At these shows, 134 electric cars were exhibited. Of this number, 70 were equipped with Motz high efficiency cushion tires, 30 were fitted with special pneumatic tires and the remainder used other types."

"Thus, 55 per cent electric cars had Motz cushion tires as standard equipment." "The new design of the tire can be tipped forward in front of the entrance when not in use, thus removing the extra seats entirely out of the way of the passengers occupying the rear seat. The front seat of the touring cars will be upholstered so that there will be no division in the seat back and if desired three passengers can occupy the seat."

ROADSTER ALSO.

In the 1915 series an entirely new body type of roadster has been designed, which is not only unique in its special features and appearance, but very practical as well. The beautiful stream line effect has been carried out in this new design, the deck sloping gracefully from the back of the seat and rounded at the rear. The gasoline tank is entirely enclosed and out of sight and provision has also been made for carrying two tires mounted on rims, or a wire wheel mounted with additional extra tire, under the deck completely enclosed, and out of view. An entirely new feature is to be found in the way of enclosing the top when lowered. The unique design of the body provides for the special top to be entirely concealed when not in use.

GOSBY COMPANY OPENS NEW BRANCH QUARTERS

Opening its doors tomorrow morning in the new Broadway auto row the A. B. Gosby Motor Car Company, handling the Ohio electric cars and Stutz automobiles in this territory, will make its bow to the public with a larger and more pretentious branch house in Oakland.

The new Oakland branch house of the Gosby Company will be under the management of R. S. Prybyl who is well known with the Oakland motorists through his connections with the Gosby Company. Prybyl is arranging to have the new branch completely equipped to handle the service end of Ohio electric and Stutz car owners in Alameda county. He has also arranged with A. L. Cosby, the head of the firm, to have the latest models of the Ohio electric on the Oakland sales-room floor beginning tomorrow morning.

DEMAND FOR FREAK CARS IS HANDICAP

"A tendency among a large class of buyers to want something a little different than standard models, is handicapping the production of many automobile factories," says Ben Hammond of the Elsie Kar. "Of course, we have to meet this demand, just as do all builders of high grade cars, but I believe many make a mistake in not buying the standard. It stands to reason that the designer has given considerable thought to the subject and adopted equipment that seemed to him, as an expert, to best suit the requirements of harmony, quality and good taste."

SELLS BUICK AND WEDS FAIR BUYER

Romance Follows in Wake of the Record Trainload Shipment.

"In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love" can also be applied to other seasons of the year, for it was during November of last year that a pretty little romance, which has just developed, had its inception. The consummation of affairs of love and business impresses one as being decidedly unromantic, but the old tendency and exception to the rule has proved itself correct once more.

One of the most successful salesmen of the Howard Automobile company's San Francisco force is George W. Peak, formerly connected with the Chicago branch of the Buick Motor company and a graduate of the law department of the University of Chicago. Peak was attracted to the coast by stories of the trainloads of Buick automobiles shipped to the Howard Automobile company, Buick distributors for the Pacific coast. It is a well-known saying that "truth is stranger than fiction," and so it proved in Peak's case, for the same influence that brought him west secured for him a bride in the person of Miss Ethel Mary Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Myers, 15 Arguello Boulevard, San Francisco. Miss Myers, an enthusiastic automobilist, was attracted by the accounts in the daily papers of the progress toward San Francisco of the largest and most valuable trainload of automobiles brought to the coast by the Howard Automobile company, and she determined to visit the Buick salesrooms and investigate. She met George there and he assumed his most charming manner with the determination to make a sale.

As the trainload of automobiles, "just fresh from the east," was to be photographed for moving picture purposes, Miss Myers, being a decidedly charming and affable young lady, was asked to be photographed in this picture taking delivery of her car. After considerable remonstrance she acquiesced, and it was not realized at that time that Dan Cupid had begun to do his deadly work and assist in her decision to thus become an attractive figure in the picture.

Peak sold the car to Miss Myers, and, as is natural, he often found excuses to drive Miss Myers away in her car from the Howard Automobile company, after she had been in for gasoline or something of the kind.

Weeks went by and not only little Dan worked overtime, for it was as in the days of the chivalrous knight and the little lady had to be wooed and wooed before she would consent to be completely won over. All this was kept a secret, until one day the young couple staid a month and were married at high noon with only the immediate relatives in attendance.

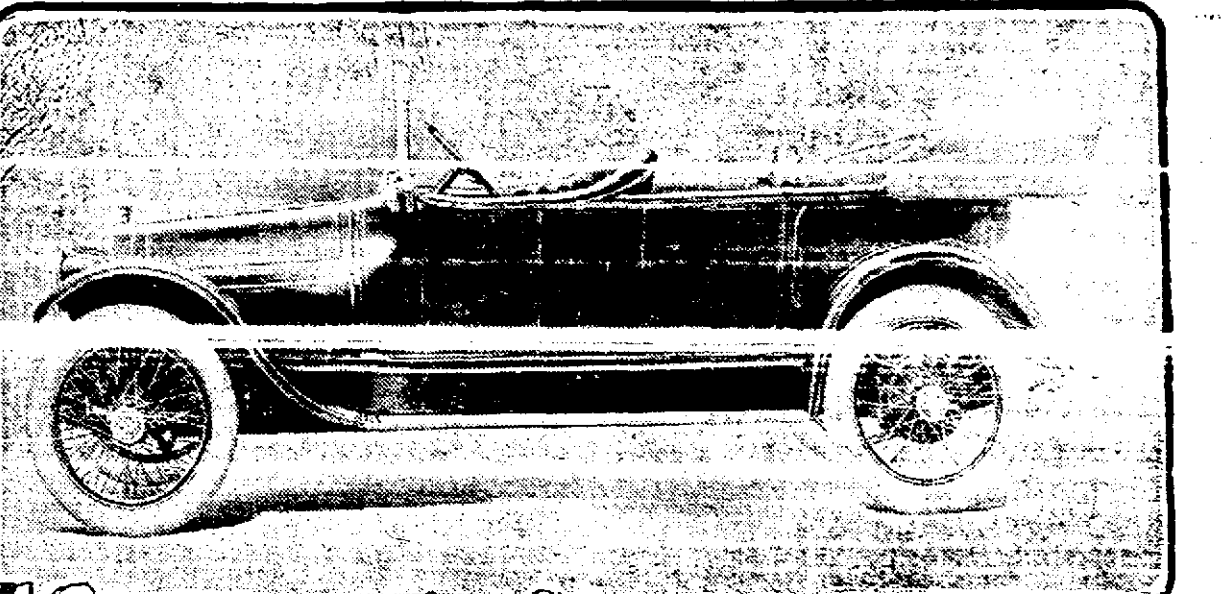

Peak is being congratulated upon his choice of a bride, and the well wishes of the Buick organization go with the young couple.

MERCER CAR TESTERS BUCKING SNOW DRIFTS

"When the recent blizzard which struck the east had subsided sufficiently to allow motorists to get out of their homes, Mercer test cars were immediately sent out to break the roads in the vicinity of the factory in Trenton. Work of this kind provides a wonderful test. It was, however, great sport and the Mercer test cars would much prefer bucking through a good-sized snow bank than to make their tests on ordinary roads."

REMARKABLE ECONOMY OF MOTOR TRUCKS CITED

The H. O. Harrison Company has received a copy of a letter from R. J. Schmunk, general sales manager of the Peerless Motor Car Company written to him by J. Sercombe, of Toronto, Canada, in which he tells of the small expense of upkeep for two Peerless trucks during the past two years, the total expense being $387.10.

In speaking of this, Manager Burman says that this is just one of the many instances that has been brought to his attention during the last four or five months in regard to the upkeep of Peerless trucks. "This experience has not only been met with in the east, but the same can also be said of the west," says Burman.

"Take for instance the wonderful service shown by the trucks now owned by the Kings River-Hume Auto Service Company of Canada, which is undoubtedly the most severe test trucks have ever been put to in the United States, and while, of course, the upkeep of these trucks has been larger than the two used on the level country and easy roads around Toronto, nevertheless, it has been proportionately small."

T. W. Casner, Harry Jackson and Billy Howe, of Asbury Park, N. J., have just completed a 1156-mile motorcycle trip to Niagara Falls and Canada.

"Nearly a Quarter-Century of Leadership"

New Stevens-Duryea Expressing A Faultless Standard of Perfection

Is Here on Exhibition and for Demonstration

We believe there is a sufficient number of people who desire distinctive motor-cars of the highest quality to justify Stevens-Duryea standards.

Therefore, this company will continue its policy of concentrating upon a single model expressing the soundest mechanical principles with the utmost refinement. To ensure the highest standard of quality—luxury, beauty, style, and grace—the car complete, including every detail of the body, is built in our own plant.

High quality means high prices; there is no exception to this rule and no escape from this fact.

The Stevens-Duryea Company is committed to its present standards and any change will be in the direction of higher quality, if such a thing is possible.

LOZIER ENGINEER PRAISED BY FORD

Comments of a complimentary nature from one motor car manufacturer to another are rare enough to deserve more than ordinary notice. Probably the highest tribute ever paid to John G. Perrin, the veteran designer of Lozier cars, occurred during the recent New York show. In conversation between Henry Ford, the man who put "Quantity" in quantity production, and Duncan Curry, well known newspaper man, the talk drifted on the new models for the show. "Have you seen the new Lozier Four?" was asked of Ford. "No, I failed to see the Lozier exhibit on my hurried inspection of the show," he replied, "but if it was designed by John Perrin it must rank with the best cars built in America. I consider Mr. Perrin the greatest automobile engineer in this country."

The high compliment paid to Perrin's efforts in furthering the progress of the automobile industry, recalls the many innovations introduced by the Lozier engineer. When the Bosch magneto, now used almost universally on American cars, was unknown in this country, Perrin advised its adoption on the Lozier product. Later he designed the first fore-door car built in America, which by a peculiar coincidence became the prototype of the first car built in America. Perrin also obtained recognition as one of the first engineers to produce a really efficient six-cylinder car, and was one of the first to advocate four forward speeds. His latest car, the new Lozier Light Four, is considered by many prominent engineers to be his greatest achievement.

HAYNES 'TESTERS' DO THOROUGH JOB

"Most people have a very vague idea as to what really constitutes the test of an automobile," said W. E. Cochran of the Haynes Automobile Company. "With the Haynes Company it means a great deal. From the time the raw material comes into the factory until the finished car is ready for shipment, tests are continually being made. The steel must be tough and strong. The casting must be free from imperfections, and every finished part must stand the test of a rigid inspection before being used."

After the motor has been assembled and filled with oil, it is bolted to a testing block and turned by an electric motor for six hours; then every part is tightened and adjusted, and the motor is run under its own power for a period of ten hours, after which it is rigidly inspected and installed in the chassis.

"The road testers then examine and on every part of the chassis. They adjust the brakes, tighten all screws, nuts, and electrical connections, and take it out on the road. They first test the brakes and try each of the gears, then they test the minimum and first speed on high gear. They then adjust the steering to a full gear adjustment. They drive the car on various grades, at times without any driver will ever encounter. All parts must work in unison before the road test is completed."

NORTHERN ROUTES OPEN FOR TRAVEL

Season Starting Early, Says
Overland Automobile
Dealer.

The roads in the mountain sections of California are opening up for travel according to J. T. Barnes of J. W. Leavitt & Company, Pacific coast agents for the Overland cars.

Barnes says: "We have just shipped a carload of Overlands to Atlanta, our agent there asking for a hurried shipment as the roads are opening up in good shape."

"We have shipped two carloads to Dunsmuir, two carloads to Klamath Falls, and two carloads to Arbutus."

"A sale to a Klamath Falls owner who made the purchase in the city resulted in some good roads information. This owner wished to drive home and before starting found that the road all the way to Grant's Pass was open. This means that one can get well into Oregon this early season of the year."

"The roads in Siskiyou county are opening up. We have just sold a Willys-Utility truck with a stage bus body for the run between Hornbrook and Happy Camp. The bus was driven overland to Happy Camp, showing that the roads are open for the north."

A stage line people report splendid fishing this season and it was to accommodate a large number of fishermen who had made reservations at the different hotels that the stage line had been motorized."

HOUSE MOVER TESTS STUDEBAKER MACHINE

You have to hand it to the automobile for versatility. While motor cars are primarily pleasure vehicles and stories are told on every side about how farmers use their machines to till the soil and the various other schemes for making the family auto furnish the motive power for machinery, etc., yet it remained for an Oakland man to go the limit in showing what a car could do in an emergency.

This week while the Walter Seuell & Son house moving firm was moving a two-story house in Oakland, it became necessary to give the horse that was furnishing the motive power a respite, while the house had to be kept a-moving so as not to block the traffic. Nothing daunted, Seuell called up the Mathewson Motor Company and asked for one of the Studebaker cars with the irreversible steering feature to breach over the emergency.

In a few seconds the Studebaker car was on the job. The wheels were set at the proper angle, the clutch released on the low gear, and the car started on its rounds without attention or driver maintaining the circle truer than any horse that was ever shod. The house was kept on the move by the Studebaker until the horse was back again on the work.

MOVING PICTURE FIRM.

One of the busiest motor trucks in California is a Kissel Kar, 34-ton model in the service of the Universal Film Company, a big moving picture concern that "stages" most of the photoplays on the Pacific coast. This truck not only transports from point to point the baggage and paraphernalia necessary, but is often called upon to carry a load of actors. A stage line people report splendid fishing this season and it was to accommodate a large number of fishermen who had made reservations at the different hotels that the stage line had been motorized."

AVIATRIX SMITTEN WITH AN ELECTRIC

"Who would have thought an automobile could have run so smoothly; this is the nearest thing to riding in an airplane I have ever experienced," exclaimed Mrs. Silas Christofferson, wife of the record-breaking aviator, as she was riding home in an Ohio Electric car from the aviation grounds one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Christofferson had been taking a morning soar through the clouds when I. R. Gates of the A. B. Cosby Motor Company, who is a friend of the Christoffersons, happened along with the Ohio Electric Demonstrator. Mrs. Christofferson was about to leave for her apartments and accepted an invitation from Gates to ride home in the Ohio Electric.

Mrs. Christofferson was so enthused with the Ohio during the trip that she said she would have her husband buy her one as soon as he was through with the big race he is now entering.

When Mrs. Christofferson was shown the simplicity of the Ohio control she declared it little short of marvelous and was exceedingly surprised at its ease of operation. She also remarked upon the exclusiveness of the body design and the elegance of the interior fittings.

Mrs. Christofferson has owned several cars of different makes and is a good judge of automobiles. Besides being an enthusiastic motorist, Mrs. Christofferson is a clever aviatrix and she contemplates entering the San Francisco-Bakersfield aerial race this month with her husband.

WHAT "TILL FLOATING" MEANS.
For motorists interested in coming to a simple and complete understanding of what the term "till floating" means, when applied to automobile rear axles, the Studebaker Corporation has prepared a folder which fully explains the different types, in language free from every taint of technicality.

Mr. and Mrs. James Motley of New York, are planning a cross country motorcycle trip this summer.

THE LOZIER FOUR is the response to that demand—that need—that desire.

YOU'VE DREAMED—as thousands of others have dreamed—"Some day I'll own a Lozier, too."

THAT DREAM is now possible of realization. The new LOZIER FOUR at $2250 is within your reach at the price you want to pay.

MOTOR CARS IN MEXICO MAKE GOOD

The Value of Cars and Tires Are Proven in Maneuvers

The work that the automobile is doing in the civil war in Mexico, is attracting the attention of military engineers the world over, and it is safe to say that the lessons learned from the experience with the motor car there, will to a great extent, determine its status in modern campaigns, should some conflict break out between the big powers.

In the present revolution in Mexico, where the wires are kept hot with news of the progress of the fighting, it is not too much to say that the biggest part that has ever been enacted by automobiles up to date, in this line of work, though their use in warfare has been tried on a limited scale in a number of recent wars. Both the Federal and Constitutionalists have a number of Cadillacs in service and judging by the repeated orders that are arriving at the factory, they must be making good in the war in southern Mexico.

Cadillacs in service in their armies, that have made and are making trips, calling for the highest qualities of power, adaptability to any road conditions, and sterling wearing features, and it speaks volumes for these American cars that they have gone through such nerve-racking tests again and again, making splendid time over almost impassable roads and trails.

The reputation for reliability that the Cadillac has established in Mexico," remarked Phil T. Prather, general manager of the Don Lee Company, "shows that in peace or war they can be depended upon to do the work. The fact that these cars, equipped with 'Nobby Tread' tires are able to travel over the roads of Mexico, which in many cases run through rough mountainous country, and over barren stretches of desert land, illustrates conclusively that they possess power, adaptability and traction qualities of unusual order."

"We have received advice from the border telling us that the work these Cadillacs do, is almost beyond belief; that wherever the army goes they will be found. When generals and their staffs have to be transferred to some distant point, where the rail connections are interrupted, it is the motor car that 'does the job.' In addition, they are used by couriers carrying dispatches, by engineers and sappers, by the commissary, and in fact, in almost every branch of the army where speed and reliability is demanded."

"Owing to the dangerous nature of the roads traversed it is essential to the safety of the motorists, that their cars be equipped with good brakes and dependable anti-skid tires, so that the combination of reliability, with 'Nobby Tread' tires, and their known non-skid features, makes the safety of the big Mexican officials doubly secure."

General Carranza has for his personal use a 1934 Cadillac, shod with 'Nobby Tread' tires, and is enthusiastic over the way it serves him in his daily governmental work.

INSTRUCTIONS ON CARE OF CASINGS

Goodyear Factory Issues New Series of Bulletins for AUTOISTS.

A notable contribution toward the education of tire users in the care of their tires—"Tire Conservation," is a series of bulletins dealing with various phases of the situation, issued by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio. Strange as it may seem, the tire companies find that comparatively few car owners obtain all the mileage that is possible from tires, and cost per mile is thus higher than necessary. A knowledge—and its application—of tire conservation lowers tire cost per mile, and it is upon this basis that the Goodyear Company has based its campaign of folders. The information the leaflets contain is not confined to such subjects as inflation, pressure, but explains how mileage may be increased and tire lives prolonged through the use of accessories—inside protectors, tire dough, etc.

Tires, like human beings, suffer from ill-treatment, and the company believes that if co-operating with the users and educating them, through co-operation, how to make them last longer, it has taken another big step forward.

The Goodyear factory reached the production mark of 10,000 tires per day, this week.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY'S NEW PACKARD TRUCK FOR THE BULK DELIVERY OF ZEROLINE TO THE GARAGES OF MOTORISTS IN AND ABOUT LOS ANGELES.

STANDARD DETAILS OF CYCLOCAR TOLD

The growth of any industry is shown first by magazine and newspaper publishers naturally from an advertising standpoint chiefly; but when we stop and realize that within six months time, three monthly magazines on strictly cyclocars and then accessories are being published in this country, we can appreciate the extent of this one industry which will benefit the multitudes of people. There are fifty-five independent manufacturers already that have declared themselves for the manufacture of cyclocars. Complete specifications have been placed before the public and several factories are under way; however, only three of them are actually making delivery in carload lots. The question of the sturdy Standard of Cyclocars has been one of much discussion. The chief contention is between a truly speaking cyclocar and a cheap automobile. This decision can very easily be made, when one has the opportunity of comparing the cars side by side. When we take a few of the standard units of construction and follow them through the specifications of the fifty-five manufacturers already submitted, we can decide for ourselves what is standard.

We have the motor first which shows thirty-seven two cylinder air cooled against eighteen four cylinder. Thirty-one are friction driven, thirteen sliding, eleven planetary. Thirty-three are belt driven, fifteen shaft, seven chain drive. Twenty-five are of a thirty-six inch tread, four fifty-six (Standard automobile tread), while the other twenty-two cars average three to every width between the 36 inch and 55 inch. The matter of ignition, which is very important, gives thirty-one to magneto, it has been found that on two cylinder motors, the Atwater-Kent or battery ignition is more practical, on account of being much easier to start and can be throttled down much slower.

In compiling our specifications from the above figures, we find that the "Sturdy Standard of Cyclocars" will have the following construction: A two cylinder air cooled motor, friction drive with double side belts to the rear wheels, thirty-six inch tread, Atwater-Kent ignition, one hundred inch wheelbase, a hard wood frame is used which takes up the road shock and motor vibration. Ninety per cent of the cars are selling for $375 at the factory and the remainder are all under the $500 mark. There is a wonderful future in this branch of automobile business for the cyclocar reaches the multitudes between the motorcycle and automobile class.

PACKARD TRUCKS FOR BIG OIL CO.

In order to meet the service requirements occasioned by the fast increasing sales of Zeroline in bulk, the Standard Oil Company has added a new three-ton Packard truck to its battery of motor delivery trucks doing duty in Los Angeles. The new vehicle is probably the most magnificent motor truck in the United States employed in the distribution of a petroleum product. Because of its size and highly decorative finish it is attracting much attention. The color scheme of this delivery truck is white, set off by blue and gold running gear. Prominently featured in the car's decorations is the great white bear of the Arctic, selected as the sign of Zeroline, because a symbol of the Polar regions also suggests a characteristic claimed for the Standard Oil for motor cars emphasized in the slogan: "It keeps the motor cool."

Bulk delivery of Zeroline is comparatively new, but automobile owners are fast awakening to a realization of the economy and convenience of the method, and as a result it is revolutionizing delivery methods employed in the sale of motor oil. On the Pacific coast from

PROMOTIONS FOR TWO LOZIER MEN

As a result of the remarkable success from a quality and sales standpoint, of Designer John G. Perrin's latest car, the Lozier Light Four, two of his assistants, F. J. Schwarzenberger and John Turcotte, have been promoted by the Lozier Company, Schwarzenberger becoming superintendent of the final assembly plant at the Detroit works and Turcotte being advanced to the position of final inspector.

Both men have been long associated with Chief Engineer Perrin. Turcotte acting as his assistant for more than eleven years. Their promotions are in recognition of assistance given Perrin in perfecting details of the four cylinder Lozier car which sells for $2100. In Lozier racing days Turcotte was closely associated with Ralph Mulford and "used" for the Lozier Company the cars with which Mulford won the 1911 Vanderbilt and other races.

SAFETY FIRST WAS PREHISTORIC IDEA

Rubber Tire Man Tells About Importance of Being Careful.

(By E. H. TIBBITTS, B. F. Goodrich Company.)

To understand and appreciate the present crusade for "Safety First," one must go back to the very beginning and trace the development of the movement from rambling ideas and instincts to its present organized state.

DISCIPLINE FOUNDATION OF SAFETY

Nature has ever been a stern disciplinarian. Break one of her laws and the punishment is immediate, certain and relentless. Man's instinct for self-preservation comes down through the ages from his prehistoric ancestor, whose sole thought was to protect himself and his own immediate possessions.

So Safety First is not a new idea. But the application of Safety First with regard to the rights of others is decidedly a new trend.

But now about the lives of others? As society advanced, it has become more complex. Other lives have encroached upon the importance of keeping safety the first consideration.

NEW IDEA OF SAFETY.

Since the psychology of the new movement is that familiarity with dangers breeds carelessness, it rests upon the duty of the employer to impress upon employees the danger of taking chances. So "Safety First" has been adopted and endorsed by the business world.

Men look upon other men's lives with as much regard as their own. Now we have corporations safeguarding their employees, instead of individual for himself. That "Safety First" for others helps all is brought out by the lowering of accident rates reported everywhere.

Probably in no other field is a more careful, systematic effort being made to safeguard the lives and property of others than in the railroad field.

RAILROADING AND MOTORING.

Transportation hinges on safe traction. To keep American train wheels on the rails over two thousand five hundred million spikes are inserted daily by a vast army of men.

It is essential that rails must resist the side pressure of the wheel flange, else the second greatest industry of the world—railroad transportation—would not be possible.

SAFE TRACTION CERTAIN.

But to make the traction certain and safe, there was added to the smooth tread five bars to take the place of the side flange and cross-tie—the bars to resist the tendency to have the track and the cross-bar to make the brake effective.

Before the inception of the "Safety First" movement motorists demanded luxurious equipment, deep upholstery, electric light, etc. for the inside of their limousines, but they did not give much attention to the little red tail lamp that meant safety for them.

They demanded deep cushions, beautiful lines and finished appointments, but forgot the importance of safe traction. Now down below stands the tire with its five safety flanges. Although unseen it is now considered of vital importance. Since the inception of the "Safety First" movement more and more car owners are turning to the safety tread to help them avoid accidents. And statistics showing the lessening of motor car accidents point out that drivers are using caution and applying the principles of "Safety First" to motor transportation effectively.

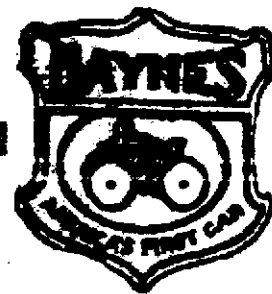

QUART RIDE POPULAR.

The Chester N. Weaver Co., Studebaker dealers in San Francisco, are educating Californians up to what has been termed the "One-quart ride." An auxiliary tank is fitted to the Studebaker "four" or "six." This buyer is asked to fill from his own quart measure. The ride then takes place over a mileage measured by the magnetic speedometer.

THE LOW COST FOR KNOX TRACTOR UPKEEP SHOWN

On June 7, 1933, the Knox Automobile Company of Springfield, Mass., installed a Knox-Martin Tractor in the fire department at Springfield. In writing to Samuel M. Crim, president of the Relevance Automobile Company, agent for the Knox-Martin Tractor as to what the gasoline has cost since then, Captain J. H. Shurman of Engine 4, Walnut street station, says: Mileage covered, 171; used 36 gallons gasoline at a total cost of $15.30; lubricating oil used, 4 quarts at a total cost of $0.40; 16 pounds of hard grease, $1; dry cells, 11 at $2.00; Penn-O-Lite tank, $1.50; total cost for nine months, $20.15.

Exposition Chief Buys Haynes Car

Chas. C. Moore, President of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, has purchased a Haynes four-cylinder car equipped with the Vulcan Electric Gear Shift.

Worthy of note is the fact that this car is the stant use—much more so than were any of its twenty-six predecessors, and, due largely to its simplicity of control. Mr. Moore frankly admits that only now is he deriving the real pleasures of motoring. No doubt about it—the hand shift method suffers by comparison.

Before you buy, look over other cars at the price you want to pay, compare the specifications, part for part, with those of the Haynes. Here are a few facts regarding the

The Haynes motor has a bore of 4 1/4 in. and stroke of 5 1/4 in.; cylinders cast in pairs; L-head design; valves overhead; with a dynamometer rating of 45 and 45 horsepower on the "six" and "four," respectively. Ignition is provided by the American Simms Dual High Tension Magneto; carburetion, by the Stromberg device; electric lighting and starting, by the Leeco-Neville separate unit system; and cooling by centrifugal pump, pressed steel fan and cellular radiator.

Other Haynes specifications are the splash and gravity lubrication system; contracting hand clutch; Timken and McCue full floating rear axle; twenty-one gallon gas tank on rear of chassis; motor-driven tire pump; extra demountable rim; and Collins curtains. Shock absorbers on the "six."

Two "sixes" and a "four" at $2785, $2700 and $1985, respectively. The prices of these cars equipped with the hand shift are $2555, $2500 and $1785.

It will be a pleasure for us to demonstrate the Haynes to you. Come in, call up or write for appointment.

How Goodyear Fights Loose Treads

After we ended rim-cutting we took up loose treads—another major tire trouble.

At the base of the tread in every tire there must be a breaker strip. In all tires save Goodyears this strip is made of closely-woven fabric. And road use often separates this breaker strip from the rubber.

We bought the rights to a patent fabric which we picture here. It cost us $50,000, and it forms our breaker strip.

This fabric rivets itself to the rubber. The tread rubber is forced down through these openings, while in a plastic state, forming hundreds of large rubber rivets. Then the whole tire is vulcanized en masse.

This lessens by 60 per cent the risk of this tread separation. And no other maker employs it.

Millions Saved That is one way in which we save tire users millions of dollars yearly.

Another is our "On-Air" cure. No-Rim-

Cut tires are final-cured on air bags, under actual road conditions. This saves the countless blow-outs due to wrinkled fabric. This extra process costs us $1,500 daily, and no other maker employs it.

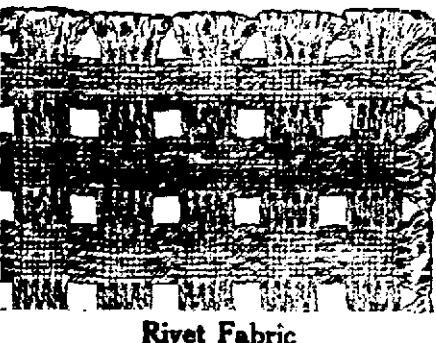

In these tires alone is rim-cutting ended in a satisfactory way. We control the method.

And these tires alone have our double-thick All-Weather tread—a smooth-running anti-skid.

16 Makes Cost More No-Rim-Cut tires are the only tires embodying these costly features.

After years of tests on countless cars they have come to outsell any other tire in the world.

Yet there are 16 makes of tires that sell at higher prices. Some nearly one-half higher. Three such tires cost as much as four Goodyears. That's a curious situation.

TO MAKE TIRES IN OAKLAND FACTORY

Hercules Tire Will Be Popular California Product

Following up its advantageous position in the motor world, Oakland is soon to have a tire factory of its own.

The Hercules tire maker, who came here from the east recently and has been building out his factory along the lines of the patent process under which the Hercules tires will be made. Hercules has made quite a few of the Hercules tires at the company's Emeryville plant and found them to be in every respect. He says:

"The Hercules tire is not only a superior tire, but by costly demonstration

Hercules tire is the very best tire yet made; the special points of excellence of the Hercules tire are: 1. The tread, or grain of the tread of the tire, is made of nearly pure rubber with a smooth, instead of porous, surface.

The company guarantees the Hercules tire to run a distance of 30,000 miles or more, over ordinary roads, without any wear, and has demonstrated that it has run more than 30,000 miles.

"Hercules tires are produced at as low a cost and equal quality in California as anywhere. Why not? First, labor for the purpose is as cheap as in the east, work being done by piece work at the same prices as in the east. Second, our company will be equipped with the most up-to-date machinery, while most of the old tire companies are using the old kind of machinery, which is of less efficiency than the modern designs, the tire industry having sprung mushroom-like, and for the eastern factories to now equip with modern machinery and throw out old kind into the junk pile would be to dissipate their assets. Third, the component parts of the auto-tire are rubber, cotton, and chemical compounds. Rubber can be delivered at Oakland direct from the rubber plantations of South America and Central America and Mexico, instead of the expense of the Panama canal more cheaply than the same goods can be delivered in Ohio, the rubber manufacturing center of the world; the same is true of cotton and chemicals, the cotton which is woven on the California coast from long fibre Sea Island cotton. Fourth, climatic conditions are most favorable in California as the cold weather of the east is absent and a large annual saving can be made in testing expense of the factory.

"Fifth, on all sales on the Pacific coast the freight rates will in large part be saved to profit account, which in the case of tires shipped here from eastern factories, their freight rates saved to us become an expense account to them."

TRAINMAN SPOILS A MOTOR MYSTERY

Detects Studebaker Six Auto Starting Non-stop Run to Oakland.

In the crisp cold of a spring morning a car inspector was passing down the main line of a solid tramroad of automobiles above that to leave the Detroit yards for the Mathewson Motor Company of Oakland.

It was just before dawn, all the night sounds of the city had been hushed; the day sound had not yet begun.

"The inspector stood for a moment, bending close to a car to decipher its number. He straightened up with a puzzled look on his face and called to a trainman, several cars distant.

Together the two put their ears close to the car. Both heard the muffled beat of a gasoline motor, plainly idly away. The inspector reported the unusual situation to his superior who promptly got in touch with the Studebaker corporation from whose shipping platform the trainload had come. In a few minutes an automobile dashed into the yards and a man, duly authorized, broke the cover of the car and started it. For a time he had trouble in locating the moving motor but he finally found it in a Studebaker "Six" that stood duly blocked and braced, within a few inches of the spot where the inspector had paused to jot the car number. Obeying to his manipulation of the switch, the car stopped.

An investigation followed. All Studebaker cars are driven, after passing the final road test to the shipping platform and up the steep incline for loading. The actual work of rolling them on board the freight cars is done by man-power. Apparently the loading crew had failed to note that the motor of this one car had been left running. The car had been loaded in the usual way, its quietness and the absence of vibration so characteristic in six-cylinder cars, enabling it to get by, even when men were passing it.

The shipping crew, however, asserts direct denial that such a thing could be, claiming that the position of each car's switch is inspected before the door is closed.

The explanation is simple. They maintain merely that the car switched on was not the one that was loaded.

HUGO MULLER AGAIN IN THE AUTO HARNESS

Hugo Muller, one of the veterans of the automobile business in Oakland, is again in the game for himself, having announced that he has made the necessary arrangements to construct a new automobile garage building, in the city of Oakland, near Fourteenth and Broadway.

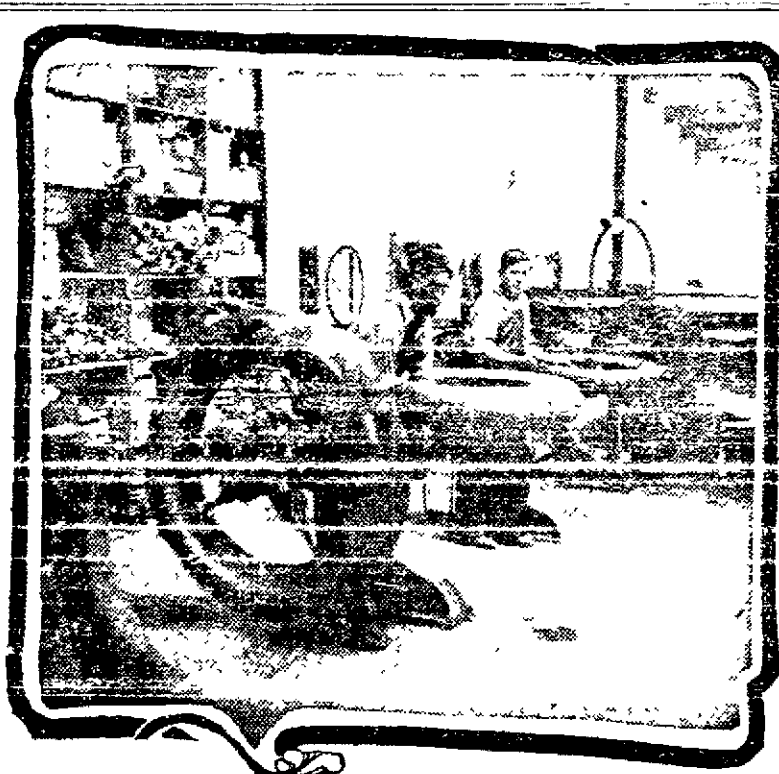

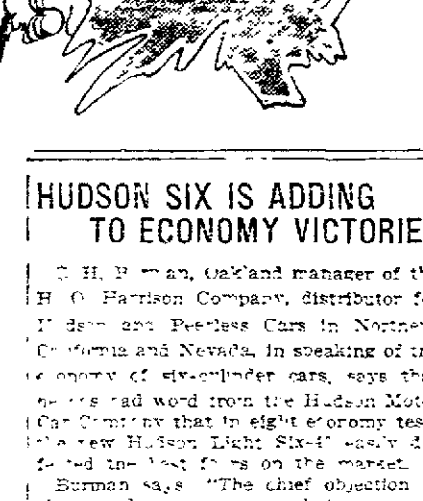

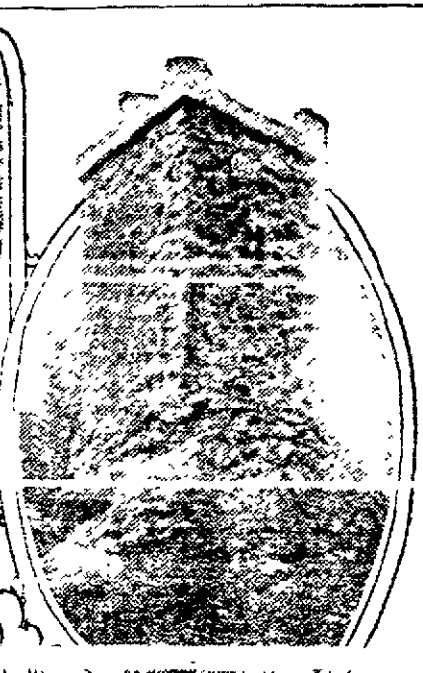

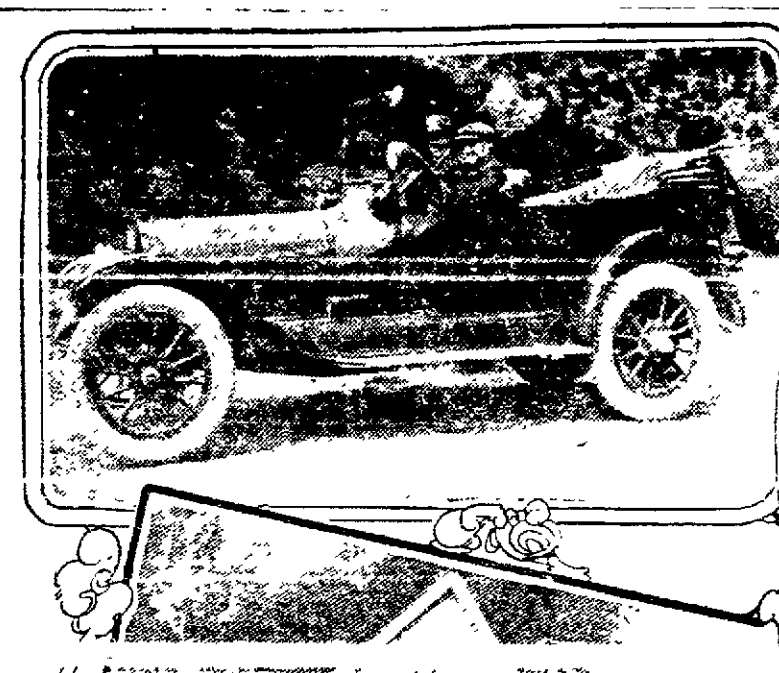

He has already opened up a branch office in the new building, and is now in the process of erecting the main structure. He will need a large number of men to do the work, and is now in the process of securing them.

CYCLECAR MAKES HIT IN ENGLAND

Londoners Take to American-Built Machine With a Hurrah.

The Light Car and the Cyclecar of London, England, the leading European cyclecar publication, in its issue of March 9 has the following encouraging report on the arrival and trial of the first American cyclecar in England: "An American cyclecar, an Imp, is in our midst, having arrived in London last week, and not only have we seen it, but have actually driven it through the streets of London. Selling at £100 in this country for $300, it is complete with hood, wind shield, electric lamps, seat, starter, horn and full equipment. It is without doubt an excellent proposition from many points of view. It is a real car, built on a real chassis, the air-cooled engine firing at the first pull of the crank, and were soon threading our way through the dense London traffic."

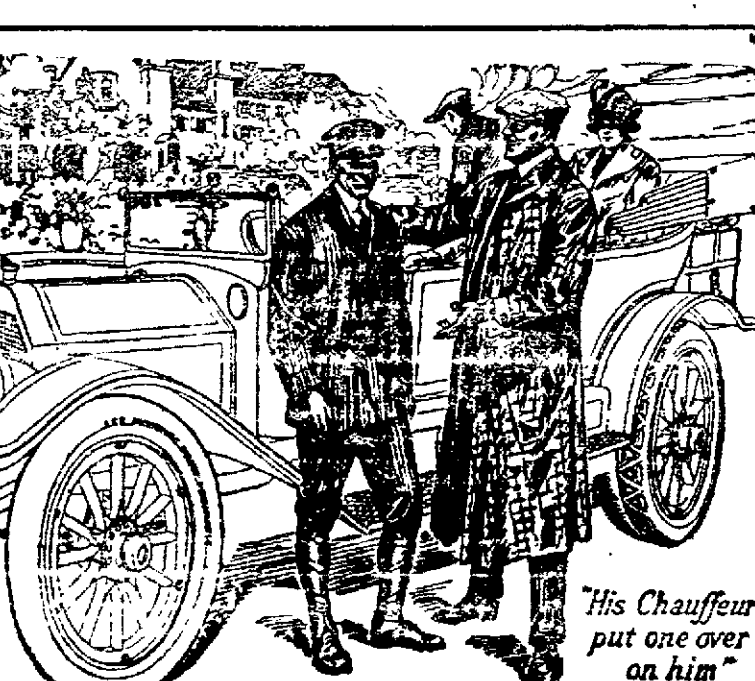

The Imp went with a daring dash almost unopposed, but without much exaggeration, it would have passed under the colonial chassis of the surrounding busses. Although our driver informed us that he did not drive the Imp, he much in London traffic, he handled it with ease. Its nimble small overall weight and quick "kick-up" makes it an ideal machine for traffic work. Up another road we went at a good speed and found it to be a real car, built on a real chassis, the air-cooled engine firing at the first pull of the crank, and were soon threading our way through the dense London traffic."

As the first British journal to have an American cyclecar driven by a member of its own staff, A. J. R. and I were surprised to make us at home with the machine, as the controls are all conveniently placed and simple in manipulation. North's Gardens, with its gradient of 1 in 10, was our objective. From a standing start at the bottom, the machine climbed up the hill at a good speed, without the slightest fuss; in fact, the gear lever was only in the third notch. Though the time at our disposal was limited, this test was sufficient to demonstrate the power of the engine and the efficiency of the transmission. The performance was all the more creditable, as the machine was hastily dispatched from America and had been taken out of the crate only a day or two previously, so that it was in quite an "untuned" condition for our first test run. At present 15 Imps are in their way over so that it will not be long before the Imp cyclecar will be a common sight on the road. The Imp is a real car, built on a real chassis, the air-cooled engine firing at the first pull of the crank, and were soon threading our way through the dense London traffic."

Said Mr. Tire-Trouble-Ridden Motorist to his chauffeur: "Jim, those tires you got for the car are wonderful. I was so disgusted with the trouble and inner tube replacements that I was determined to sell the machine, but those Lee-Puncture-Proof Pneumatic Tires have certainly opened my eyes on this three-weeks trip. Some of those roads were the worst I have ever seen—and here we are back home without a puncture or a delay. You have certainly solved the tire question for keeps, Jim, my boy." You have certainly solved the tire question for keeps, Jim, my boy. Jim isn't a wizard—he's just a wide-awake young fellow, who reads the Lee advertisements, investigates the claims, and orders Lee Puncture Proof Pneumatic Tires for his employer's car—regular tread for front, and non-skid on rear wheels. Let us show YOU the Lee Puncture-Proof Pneumatic Tire—it will solve YOUR tire troubles, and save you money. Inner tubes, too.

CAMPAIGN OF CITY-BEAUTIFICATION IS URGED

HOW NEWLY BUILT EAST END OF VERNON HEIGHTS DISTRICT LOOKS ACROSS THE NEW MUNICIPAL BOAT LANDING AT NORTHEAST END OF LAKE MERRITT. ON THE LAKE SHORE AT THIS POINT MUCH PARKING IS BEING DONE. GRAND AVENUE IS BEING NEWLY PAVED.

OAKLAND SHOULD MAKE APPEAL TO 1915 VISITOR

Trees, Plants and Grass Should Be Grown All Over the City

"Now that we have had the development of the Hegenmann plans, following the Charles Miford Robinson plans, and a City Planning exhibit, let us make some practical application of the matter," is the suggestion of Secretary A. A. Denison of the Chamber of Commerce.

To this end he is urging that the waste places of Oakland be made beautiful by the planting of grass, flowers and shrubs to prevent the removal of weeds from curb spaces, the expanding of lawns and the creation of an attractive environment.

Attention is being called to the possibility of beautifying the surroundings of the public schools by the planting of vines and flowers. In this work the caretakers of the school properties are requested to co-operate with the City Park department so that economies can be effected in the utilization of city nursery stock.

TREES AND GRASS, ASSET.

Secretary Denison lately returned from San Diego and Los Angeles where he finds that every palm tree and every bit of green is regarded as an asset. In San Diego, the city has made a census of trees and no tree may be destroyed even on private property without an option being given to the city to remove and preserve it.

"The thing which impresses the easterner," said a prominent newspaper man of Los Angeles, in talking with Secretary Denison, "is not the buildings, the stores or the city streets, but the boulevards and the trees and the plant life of the back country."

"If Oakland wants to impress the tourist, it should be by the conservation of plant life and the embellishment of every by-way. Oakland's scenic boulevards are one of its best assets in creating favorable impressions upon the visitor and the tourist."

During the coming year there will be thousands of visitors to the world's fair who will see in San Francisco only the conventional city—paved streets and water and concrete. The city's average visitor can see in any great center of population.

Oakland should take advantage of the appeal to the aesthetic through her boulevards, parks and background of hills, and by making every tree, every public square, playground and school yard in Oakland a thing of beauty.

After the pleasure work that our city has done, mother city, and civic organizations can take hold of, which does not require any large outlay, but may be brought about through the co-operation of existing agencies as is shown by the activity of the pupils of the public schools in Dayton, Ohio, where 10,000 children have been enlisted in a "city beautiful" campaign under the direction of the members of the women's clubs and with the co-operation of the teachers and board of education.

CLUBWOMEN BOOST.

Women of Oakland have shown themselves to be enthusiastic boosters. Particularly in the Oakland club has the spirit been shown of late. Miss Bevis Wood stirred the pride of the members in their city and its advantages by delivering a lecture, in which the women were taken on a tour of the city. She told of the great waterfront construction work, the possibilities of the inner harbor, described the Key Route pier, the longest in the world, the Western Pacific Santa Fe and Southern Pacific stations, the new city hall municipal auditorium, the new school houses, various parks and playgrounds, new skyscrapers, handsome residences, Hotel Oakland, and the various attractive drives. Stereoscopic views of these and many other Oakland attractions were thrown on a screen. Miss Wood urged the further beautifying of the city by the planting of trees.

ELLIS LANDING IN USE SINCE 1849

RICHMOND, April 11.—In looking over the situation of the new harbor at Richmond, the important fact must be borne in mind that a shipping port has existed at Ellis Landing since 1849. In those days a line of schooners ran between this port and San Francisco, taking across the bay produce from the rich fields of Contra Costa county and returning with supplies for the mining districts up the river. docks have been outgrown. The task of improving this natural harbor to meet modern transportation requirements is receiving expert attention.

The Ellis Landing and Dock Company, which has acquired this historic property is planning to erect docks, wharves and warehouses of a most modern type. Ferry service will connect with San Francisco.

Work on dredging the old and new Ellis Landing is quickly progressing and will be completed in contrast time.

COUNCIL PLANS IMPROVEMENTS

Clubhouse, Seawall Construction and Park Water System Projects.

ALAMEDA, April 11.—Several big improvements are being contemplated by the city council, these including a new clubhouse in Lincoln Park, several along the shores of Washington Park and Bay Island avenue, and water systems in Washington and Jackson Parks. The council will meet next week to discuss the work and the offers were referred to the recreation commission and the street committee. The contracts will be awarded at the next meeting of the council.

The recreation commission, at the instance of the Alameda Tennis Club, recommended the building of a clubhouse in Lincoln Park. This building will not only accommodate the tennis players, but will be used by other athletes.

The building is to cost about $300. The south end of Washington Park will be greatly improved by the installation of the bulkhead. This will permit of a large sand beach being established and will be a protection to the banks. The recreation commission is planning a most attractive setting at the south end of the park, the banks being terraced and planted in lawns and flowers.

SEAWALL IMPROVEMENT.

The Bay Island avenue seawall will permit of the improvement of that thoroughfare into a most attractive boulevard. The waves have been washing the banks along the shore at this point and in order to protect the street the bulkhead was ordered.

Jackson and Washington parks are to be thoroughly equipped with water systems. It is possible that the schools will also take water from these plants.

The portico is about complete, there being but a small amount of interior work to be finished. The lawn have been put in and the structure placed in shape for use. Local civic bodies are planning a formal dedication of the new building as soon as it is completed.

The Alameda Venice and Bathing Company has a large force of men at work on its plant on the south shore west of Washington park. The company is to install a $200,000 park by degrees. It is expected that a portion of the plant will be ready by May 1.

The building inspector has issued many permits for businesses in various portions of the city, the building not being confined to any one section. From the manner in which the building has started it is likely that this will be a banner year in Alameda.

DISCOVERED AN HONEST MAN, POOR AND JOBLESS

CHICAGO, April 11.—Who is the most honest man in Chicago?

Perhaps John Saunders, who is 30 years old and who lives at 225 East Sixtieth place. City Custodian De Witt Greider thinks Saunders should be so characterized.

Saunders has been out of work all winter—he is a carpenter—and today he found $20 on the sidewalk in West Randolph street, between North Dearborn and North Clark streets. Saunders took it to the city hall and turned it over to the police.

"I waited forty-five minutes for someone to come back looking for it," he said, "but no one came."

Greider started after him as he went out the door. Turning to a clerk the custodian said:

RECREATION SPOT IS LURE

A beautiful scenic trip for Sunday. An easy and inexpensive trip? Is not that what you are looking for almost every week?

Between Oakland and Pinhurst, a distance of only a few miles, the scenery is in such great variety as can be seen in few places in less than a day's ride.

ENTER MORAGA VALLEY.

Beyond Pinhurst the view again changes with the rapidity of an animated film and the train shoots out into a wide valley, bordered by sloping hills carpeted with brilliant green. Ten thousand acres lie within the confines of this valley alone. It is the famous Moraga valley, with the hills of the Moraga family of that name which owned all these broad stretches.

In the early days this valley was the scene of many a dispute and even armed conflict between the adherents of the original owners and newcomers who disputed their title. The old adobe house that was once the home of one of the Moraga family may be seen on a spur of the hill to the north of the road.

Right in the center of this valley there is now being carried out one of the largest projects yet attempted in this section of the country. It is the building of a town that will be claimed, reach the same of excellence in scientific city-planning.

From the car windows the excursionist can see the result of the activity of its builders, the R. N. Burgess Company of San Francisco. Already several miles of concrete sidewalk and curb have been laid along rows of sturdy palm trees mark the streets of Moraga, the twenty-first century city.

Moraga is laid out like an octagon, with wide streets running in six different directions toward the hills. Beautiful arches will mark the entrance to the town's main thoroughfare, business and residential sections will be separated and will be kept so by building restrictions. All the chief thoroughfares will end in a civic center about which will be grouped the public buildings.

Moraga is but a part of a vast scheme of development that will turn this great valley into an orchard frame for a population of 20,000 people.

The valley will be divided into farms ranging in size from one to twenty acres. The greater part will be in comparatively small villa sites, and it is here that it is intended to bring a large and enthusiastic population of people who are now living in the cities. Lower cost of living, better health for the wife and children, ideal conditions, a little land with a lot of advantages—these are the theories that have put Moraga on the map and that will make Moraga valley into a big garden.

PICTURESQUE TOWNS.

Then on through the towns of Lafayette and Rialto, both picturesque and prosperous. Walnut Creek is reached and the excursionist has the choice of a dozen pleasant ways in which to spend the day.

On all sides are the open fields, green with alfalfa, and the orchards, peach orchards. And, most particular of all, there are the walnut groves, than which there are none better in the state than those in Walnut Creek. Trees there are here planted fifty to the acre and paying $15 per tree; a few years hence the two-acre business farmer can help out his weekly stipend.

Three miles from Walnut Creek is the famous St. Ignace Valley, a favorite spot with sightseers, and reached by as pretty a walk as one could wish for a summer Sunday afternoon.

There are a number of stops along this prettiest of Contra Costa county's routes—Canyon, a spot of the wildest natural beauty. Pinhurst, a more fertile section a little further on.

BROADWAY EXTENSION TO FURNISH NEW DRIVEWAYS

City Council Takes Step Looking Toward Big Improvement

A resolution directing the city engineer to prepare plans and specifications for the extension of Broadway was passed by the city council last week and within the next day or two another road to connect with the extension will be ordered opened up from Fifty-ninth street to connect with Rocke road in Claremont, which will complete Oakland's main artery to the hills.

This is one of the most important pieces of work in the city and for twenty years has been the desired project of the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants Exchange and property owners along the route. The Vernon Rockridge Improvement Club presented a petition last week signed by a long list of property owners.

With the proposed extension of Broadway three drives of scenic and commercial value are made possible. The simplest of these is a direct ten-minute ride from downtown into the heights of Claremont, from which point an extensive view of Oakland and vicinity, the bay view of San Francisco, with the Golden Gate and Marin hills, may be had.

Another drive made possible will be a road running up to and connecting with the Tunnel road, through the tunnel to old Brvant Station on the now abandoned California-Nevada railroad. From that point the road will swing off through the Carpentier Grant to Moraga, then back through Redwood canyon and down over the state road to connect with Thirteenth avenue and terminating at the Hotel Oakland. This will be known as the Outside Drive.

The most beautiful drive to be known as the Hill Drive will be the one to Claremont to connect with the tunnel road. A little later on this will be completed. Every lot was planned with a view to follow the natural lines of beauty and was not, as is usually the case, merely figured on a plan according to a given rule of measurement. The result is that the lots are in a variety of sizes ranging from 50 feet frontage to 100 feet.

Rockridge is reached from Broadway by a wide curved approach, starting at an entrance marked by massive white pillars. The approach was originally straight but the plan was changed at the last moment and several thousand dollars sacrificed to put in the curve.

Wide macadamized roads wind in and out and around the wide slopes with an always upward trend. Residences ranging from the cosy chalet, costing perhaps $4000, to the mansion costing $50,000, nestle among the foliage or stand out boldly on some rugged knoll. Everything that grows, from the daisy to the eucalyptus, has been used in an elaborate scheme of decoration.

"We built an imaginary house on every lot before we plotted the lots," said Fred E. Reed, president of the Fred E. Reed Co., Inc., "and the development of today is a result of our planning."

Rockridge has restrictions, a most remarkable character. The householder must improve his garden or the owners of the property will do it and send him the bill. He is not allowed to cut down a tree without the permission of the board that controls the decorative features.

The theory is that you must consider the other fellow even when dealing with what you own personally—which is one of the first precepts of city planning.

Overlooking 60 miles of bay and with a view of seven counties from the highest point, with a deep valley behind at the bottom of which lies Lake Temescal, Rockridge is ideally situated for a model of the city planners art.

Measure Awaiting Action of Reichstag May Become Effective Soon.

JAMESTOWN, April 11.—Relative of Zachary M. Wright, the Sugar Grove man who was killed in the explosion in a field and two to three miles from Sugar Grove, was in court at the action of persons residing in a place where the body was found, who refused to permit anyone to examine it until the coroner arrived.

Coroner's informant of Warren was sent to the place of making the discovery. His deputy, Dr. E. J.
Barnes, said Sugar Grove is an inland place with no features of travel consideration and the roads are hub covered with snow, and he had hence he had checked the course of the grime up to a late hour.

At this time part of the time during the rain, the body of Wright was seen, in the past of the place where it was found. The
